

Efforts to revive Czech culture lead to program

"The Czechs in Texas," a three-day symposium on Czechoslovakian culture, will be held Oct. 27-29 in Temple.

The program will feature lectures and discussions by humanist scholars and community leaders who have an interest in the Czech culture. The main speakers will be Antonin Robek, director of the Institute of Ethnography and Folklore at the Czechoslovak Academy of Science in Prague, and State Rep. Dan Kubiak. "The overall theme of the symposium is the apparent decline of Czech ethnic quality in Texas and the possible responses to the problem," explained Dr. Clinton Machann, symposium director and Texas A&M University assistant professor of English.

"Although Czechs are one of the largest ethnic groups in Texas and the language is the third most spoken in the state, the history, sociology and language of these people have not been sufficiently studied. The general public and members of the academic community, especially those of Czech extraction, have expressed a great deal of interest in the issue," he said. "This symposium is an attempt to gather these people together for a public discussion and learning experience."

Symposium activities will begin at 2 p.m. Oct. 27, at the S.P.J.S.T. Supreme Lodge, 520 N. Main, Temple. Registration will continue at 7:30 a.m. Oct. 28 at the Temple Junior College Auditorium.

The project is being sponsored by the Department of English at Texas A&M. Dr. Henry Pope, director of continuing education for the College of Liberal Arts, will be university coordinator. The program is funded by the Texas Committee for the Humanities and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The preregistration fee for the three-day session is $1 for students and $3 for the public. More information about the Texas Czech Symposium can be obtained by writing: Dr. Clinton Machann, Director, Texas Czech Symposium, Department of English, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843.

Robert Boone, Singing Cadets director for 18 years, shows members of the group how it's done during practice for Student Life weekend. The group will perform from 10-10:30 a.m. in the Memorial Student Center lounge.

Singing Cadets perform for Student Life weekend

The Singing Cadets will participate in the Student Life weekend Saturday from 10-10:30 p.m. in the Memorial Student Center lounge.

Robert Boone, director of the singers, said this weekend's concert will be very informal. The group will sing about 13 songs ranging from pop music to church spirituals.

Try-outs for the Cadets are held each semester. It is not required that the men be in the Corps. Boone gives each candidate a vocal audition, then a non-formal interview is held "to see if they will blend in with the group," said Larry Reibenstein, president of the Singing Cadets.

Reibenstein said fall is the time for the Cadets to learn the music because most tours are held in the spring.

Each year, the group puts on 40-50 concerts. "We travel about 400 miles on two Greyhound buses," said C. B. Hoshall, publicity manager.

Pyramids no longer wondrous

United Press International

Of the Seven Ancient Wonders of the World, only the pyramids of Egypt have survived the ravages of time and man. It's a puzzlement, then, why centuries-old structures — which have attracted millions of travelers from throughout the world — did not make the recently selected World Heritage List of top wonders of the world when a salt mine in Poland and some American Indian ruins in Senegal were even nominated for the list, which is intended to provide "special international recognition of natural and cultural areas of outstanding universal value" in countries around the world, said a recent release from the Department of the Interior.

Twelve sites in seven countries were selected — eight cultural, four natural. The selections included each in the United States, Canada, Poland, Ecuador and Ethiopia, one each in West Germany and Senegal. Not approved was Tunisia.

The cultural sites included POLAND: The Wieliczka mines, in operation since the 15th century; and the historic city of Cracow, dating back to the 10th century, with the 16th century castle of Wawel.

UNITED STATES: Mesa Verde National Park in Colorado, a prehistoric cliff dwellings and other ruins of the Puebloan culture which flourished during the ninth to 13th centuries.

CANADA: L'Anse aux Meadows in Newfoundland, site of the first known European settlement in North America and the only Norse found in North America.

ECUADOR: The old city of Quito, largest and best preserved historic center in South America, originally in the Spanish settlement of 1534.

ETHIOPIA: The rock churches of Lalibela, monumental architectural achievements associated with the Queen of Sheba and King Solomon.

WEST GERMANY: The cathedral of Aachen, one of the finest examples of early artistic architecture in Europe, dating back to the eighth century when Charlemagne built the Palace Chapel.

SENEGAL: The island of Gorée, a central transit point in the African slave trade for hundreds of years with many buildings of considerable architectural interest.

The natural sites included: UNITED STATES: Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming, the first national park in the world, established in 1872.

CANADA: Nahanni, a national park in the Northwest Territories containing abundant wildlife of magnificent natural scenery.

ECUADOR: Galapagos Islands, the Pacific Ocean, made famous by Charles Darwin's expedition that inspired his theory of evolution.

ETHIOPIA: Simien, a national park which includes a massive mountainous area known as the Abaya of Africa and the habitat of several rare species of animals.
