Doughboys going 'over there' again

United Press International

DETROIT — They could have been the grizzled squad featured in every grade B war movie.

The characters were all there — the effusive squad leader, the harmless girl watcher, the grouch, the immigrant still nursing a foreign accent, the sentimental philosopher.

But as they lined up in bewildered silence at the airline ticket counter, their blue and white hats and their advanced years pegged them as the Sault Ste. Marie World War I Drum and Bugle Corps.

Eleven corps members, some wives, a doctor and escorts left Detroit Metropolitan Airport Sunday for a pilgrimage "over there" to England and France, courtesy of their Upper Peninsula neighbors.

An idea last spring mushroomed into a $30,000 fundraising drive to honor the men for 40 years of patriotic performances by sending them back to France for the 60th anniversary of Armistice Day.

Seven other corps members, all veterans, stayed home due to illness or frailties of age.

Many of the members had never ventured more than a few miles from their homes in the last 60 years. The modern terminal and the rigors of sudden fame were taking their toll.

"Frankly, I'd like to go home right now. I'm tired," groused Orval Dietz, 82, a corps color bearer who got lost in the terminal while seeking a hospitality room.

On the main floor, Oral "Moose" LaCombe, the band's talkative 82-year-old leader, was herding members around baggage and counters, worrying more than necessary.

"You know," he said with feigned concern, "our drummer is 86 years old and he was hitting the beer this afternoon. He's always looking for the little boys room. But we have to take care of him. He's the only drummer we got."

A few feet away sat Sante Mirabelli, the drummer. His beer-scented breath verified LaCombe's concern.

"I was in cooks school when the war ended," the native of Italy confided in a raspy, accented voice. "I never made it over there. But if I don't go on this trip, there's no snare drum. So I gotta go."

Standing in the reception room, trying to decide what to carry on board, was Asa Brabant, who drove trucks through France in the war. He wasn't sure why the corps deserved so much fuss, but his wide-eyed eagerness for another tour was almost infectious.

"It's hard to understand what the public did for us," he said, shaking his head in genuine awe. "When you see people throw in bucks that you know damn well they can't afford, it makes you think."

"I just appreciate the fact that the people back home and elsewhere think we somehow earned it."

SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING MAJORS: TAKE OUT INSURANCE NOW

How about an "insurance" policy that your science or engineering degree will really be used? It would be nice. Especially considering the work you put into such a degree.

The Air Force will use your talents. We have openings for young men and women majoring in selected science and engineering academic fields — like Aeronautical, Aerospace, General and Electrical Engineering, Mathematics, Physics and Computer Technology, and many more.

One way to get into these jobs is through Air Force ROTC. Our AFROTC scholarship can help you financially so you can concentrate on getting your degree. AFROTC is a great opportunity to help yourself through college, and the Air Force is a great opportunity to really use what you learn.

Look into the Air Force ROTC program at your campus. It's good insurance.
