Inflation takes toll on candy

United Press International
HERSHEY, Pa. — Hershey's, the nickel chocolate bar that became an American institution early this century, will soon cost a quarter.
As of Nov. 27, Hershey Foods Corp. will raise the wholesale price of its chocolate bars and its other candy bars by 5 cents.
"Customers should start seeing the 25-cent bar on retail shelves in early January," a spokesman said Wednesday.
The new Hershey chocolate bar will be increased from 1.05 ounces to 1.2 ounces to coincide with the hike, he said.
The weight of Hershey's other candy bars — Hershey Milk Chocolate with Almonds, Mr. Goodbar, Crackle, Reese's Peanut Butter Cups, Kit Kat and Rollo — also will be increased when the new wholesale price takes effect.

Magazine calls IQ data fake

United Press International
NEW YORK — British psychologist Cyril Burt was already famous as the founder of educational psychology when he produced "scientific proof" in 1961 that intelligence is the genetic inheritance of the social upper crust. But new studies have "beyond reasonable doubt" that he made the whole thing up.
Burt's classic paper, "Intelligence and Social Mobility," was frequently cited by white supremacists as "proof" that whites inherently are more intelligent than blacks. In public appearances, Burt, himself, held that the Jews and the Irish were less intelligent than the English and that slum children were mentally inferior to children of the upper classes.
He also contended that men were smarter than women, but it was his unshakably prepared set of IQ tables showing common laborers at the bottom end of the spectrum and his assertion that heredity determined their place in that position that won acclaim.
The September issue of Science magazine cites the work of two professors who have been studying Burt's controversial findings and concluded that the eminent psychologist fabricated his figures.
Prof. Leon Kamin of Princeton University was one of the first to suspect figures cited in published reports by Burt, who died in 1971 after rising to the heights of his field and becoming the first psychologist ever to be knighted.
According to the magazine, Kamin said that in 1976, Burt's classic paper, "Intelligence and Social Mobility," contained several extremely improbable statistics.
Further digging by Prof. D.D. Dorfman of the University of Iowa turned up evidence that figures Burt allegedly had obtained from IQ tests actually given were identical with figures published more than 30 years earlier and based on another survey.
Dorfman also proved that Burt obtained the IQ figures he claimed proved the intellectual superiority of upper classes, not through IQ tests, but by selecting evenly distributed points on a bell-shaped curve, which he called "a curve of normal distribution." Row and column tables were then concocted from the figures and passed off as data actually derived from tests.
Science magazine concludes: "These findings show, beyond any reasonable doubt, Burt fixed the row and column totals of the tables of his highly acclaimed 1961 study."
The magazine noted the irony of the fabrication by Burt who "was a steady critic of other people's work when this departed in any way from the highest standards of accuracy and logical consistency. He could not see to ribbons anything shoddy or inconsistent."
