Pope appeals for freedom of religion, human dignity

United Press International
VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II has openly challenged the forces of religious oppression in a landmark speech that church observers said was aimed at the rulers of his native Poland and other Soviet-bloc countries.

The 58-year-old former Archbishop of Krakow, his voice loud and sometimes trembling with emotion, issued a powerful world-wide appeal for freedom of religion and human dignity.

John Paul, only 42 days into his papacy, told a crowd of more than 60,000 in St. Peter's Square that many Roman Catholics were "condemned to death" for their faith.

"I think of all our brothers condemned to death, if not physically, civically, because they profess their faith," the pontiff said in his Sunday noon address.

"I think of those persecuted because they are faithful to the real truth and the real justice," he said to thunderous applause.

Vatican observers said the strong-willed speech was the kind the Eastern bloc feared most from the former Cardinal Karol Wojtyla, who openly resisted Communist interference in Polish church affairs.

Although the pope made no direct reference to nations or governments, the observers said his pointed reference to "civic" persecution was aimed at religious harassment in Soviet-controlled countries.

"We must never forget our brothers who pay for their faith with condemnation, discrimination, suffering — even death," he said.

John Paul's strong statements came on the heels of equally sharp comments by his mentor, Polish Primate Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, who lashed out at Eastern European governments for blocking religious radio broadcasts.

"In Vatican radio, Poland has its only Catholic broadcaster," said the 77-year-old prelate, insisting local churches have the right to air religious programs.
