Dorsett ready for Steelers

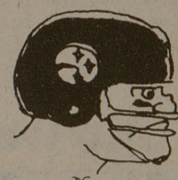

United Press International FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. - From here on in, it figures to be all downhill, a real breeze for Tony Dorsett.

Why? Because the Dallas Cowboys' star running back has made it through the toughest part of Super Bowl XIII already. He took care of as many of his friends from Pittsburgh as he could with tickets to Sunday's game and he's just getting back up on his feet again after being thrown for more than one financial loss along the way.

"All my tickets are gone," Dorsett says without bothering to camouflage his delight and relief. "They were all gone before I even got down here."

Dorsett was raised in Aliquippa, Pa., only 14 miles up the road from Pittsburgh, and he was far and away the most electrifying runner in the University of Pittsburgh's history before signing with the Cowboys two years ago. The more famous he gets in Dallas, the more his friends keep reminding him they knew him when he still was in Pittsburgh.

"I kept getting calls from a lotta long-lost friends, and all of 'em were looking for tickets," says the Cowboys' former Heisman Trophy winner. "What people don't realize is that each ballplayer has a quota. We each get 30 tickets for the Super Bowl game and we have to pay for them. That's $900. It would be very nice if someone you got the ticket for would give you the $30 you paid for it. Or even offer to pay you. That would be very nice."

Apart from Roberto Clemente, probably no other sports figure in the last 25 years had a greater impact on the city of Pittsburgh than Tony Dorsett. That includes such personalities as Chuck Noll, Terry Bradshaw, Franco Harris, Bill Mazeroski and Steve Blass, all of whom helped bring an assortment of world championships to the western Pennsylvania metropolis.

Dorsett, however, had one dimension none of the others did. He was a local boy.

This isn't anything requiring any investigation from Pete Rozelle's office, but Dorsett has been a Pittsburgh Steeler fan as long as he can remember - and still is.

"I've always been a Steeler fan and I'm still a Steeler fan to this day," he says unabashedly. "I remember them from when I was still a kid, when they had fellows like John Henry Johnson and Dick Hoak, and still played in Forbes Field."

At Pitt, where he was everybody's All-America and became the first player in NCAA history to put together three 1,500-yard plus seasons, Dorsett never bothered too much about finesse, being mostly accustomed to sticking the ball under his arm and running with it, he says, like a bat out of hell.

With the Cowboys, it's a little different. He was NFL's Rookie of the Year and set an all-time record for Cowboys with 1,325 yards this season, but he still has a long way to go before he can equal the record set by Tom Landry during the first half of the 1970s.

"If you want excuses, I can give you a few. I don't want to sound like Al Michaels. We had a lot of turnovers and fumbles, not only during the game but during the week. Someone with Miami (on Nov. 5) had 6-4 and the guys were scared. But I think our offense improved during the second half of that game."

In the locker room, the coach didn't get all over us or anything like that, but he made us realize that we'd have to go out there and make things happen if we were going to make the playoffs. We won our division. I think it was just a little lackadaisical, complacent, and although that game to Miami, we played well during the second half. I think that turned it all around. We haven't lost a game since.

Defensive tactics questioned

United Press International MIAMI BEACH, Fla. - Legal or illegal - that's the big question concerning the Pittsburgh Steelers' defensive tactics.

Steeler coach Chuck Noll feels his club abides by the rules. Tom Landry of the Dallas Cowboys, Pittsburgh's opponent in Sunday's Super Bowl XIII, feels otherwise as do several of his players.

The controversy concerns tactics used by Steeler defensive backs when the clubs met in Super Bowl X three years ago. Cowboy receivers accused the Pittsburgh secondary of late hits and unnecessary rough play, and several Dallas players have been openly calling this week for closer officiating Sunday.

"In 1975, we didn't expect the game to be as intimidating as it was," said Landry. "We didn't mind the hitting. The only thing we resented was that there wasn't a penalty called. Our receivers couldn't get downfield. We don't care if it's tough. We can play tough, too. Just as long as they (referees) call the game."

Cowboy safety Cliff Harris also was outspoken. "They didn't see a lot of things last time," said Harris. "I hope they don't choke again. We play in the boundaries of the rules. Let's just say they play real close. I just hope the ref watches closely."

"Their defense played close to the rules in Super Bowl X. A lot of things that weren't even judgment calls, the ref didn't call. We play rough, but we play within the rules. All I want the officials to do is call a good game. Their defense did a job on our receivers last time and nothing was called."

Dallas quarterback Staubach said the tactics used by Pittsburgh secondary disrupted Cowboy offense in their championship meeting.

"We threw for a lot of it," Staubach said. "Most of that came on passes. Where it hurt us was in the third-down area. We knew we had to pass on the long and they were really on our receivers around. It was difficult for them to run them and it made it difficult for us to get the ball to them. They were us pretty good."

"There are new rules as they adjusted to those we started their old defensive step by step with them with the safeties backing up very well. Now they're doing things. They can't keep the new rules hurt all who rely on that."

"It should allow us a freedom Sunday."

Noll defended his club vigorously.

"I don't know exactly what was made," he said, far as our football team concerned, we play by the play as hard as we can. If we think otherwise, maybe we retire. We don't do anything legal."
