Senator's bill offers reward

By ESTHER CORTEZ
Battalion Reporter

A bill which would provide a $5,000 reward to persons who provide information leading to the arrest and conviction of a drug pusher has been introduced to the state legislature by Sen. Walter Mengden of Harris County. Local officials have difficulty estimating the impact the bill would have on the Bryan-College Station area if it were passed into law.

Pushers are a definite problem in this area, said Pete Sanchez, drug education specialist at the Crossroads Outreach Center in Bryan. The problem stems from Brazos County's location right in the center of drug trafficking between the larger metropolitan areas such as Houston, San Antonio, Dallas, Waco and Ft. Worth, Sanchez said.

"We've treated kids as young as 10 years old," Sanchez said. But the typical drug abuser is between the ages of 17 and 21, he said.

Besides alcohol, the most commonly abused drug is marijuana, followed by animal tranquilizers, otherwise known as PCB or "angel dust." About 90 percent of the people treated at the center are referred to it by the courts, Sanchez said, and only about 10 percent come in voluntarily.

"In any case," he said, "the abusers rarely, if ever, contribute information regarding their source of drugs."

Lt. Gene Knowles of the Bryan Police Department says the bill would definitely help.

Even now it is not uncommon for the police to receive information regarding drug pushers, Knowles said.

But it should be kept in mind that any informant is hesitant to talk to law enforcement officials because of the very dangerous situation he places himself in.

The concept behind Sen. Mengden's bill is to provide financial incentive to these people who have information about drug pushers. Art Kelly, an administrative assistant to Mengden, said the bill was modeled after a New York law which provides a lesser reward of $1,000. The Texas bill was introduced to the legislature in 1973 and again in 1975 and 1977. It failed to pass at each session. Kelly said that it generally takes two or three sessions for a bill to pass, and that in this case they were just going to keep after it. Prospects for passage of the bill might not be especially bright, Kelly said, but added "there's always the next session."

Group plans lecture

The functions of city government is the subject of a lecture by acting Bryan City Manager Hubert Nelson.

The talk, sponsored by the Mexican-American Democrats of Brazos County, will be held in the Bowie Elementary school auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

Tonight's lecture is the first of a series in MAD's Leadership Brazos County program. The program is intended to inform MAD members about civic affairs, thereby preparing them for a leadership role in the community.

Future topics for the Leadership Brazos County program include the police department, community development organizations, utilities, and schools.

The talks will explain the functions and responsibility of each organization — "what the citizen can expect," MAD chairman Daniel Hernandez said. For instance, he said tonight's talk would be a "short course on city government."

Myrna Hoskins, the economic development coordinator of the Brazos Valley Development Council (BVDC) will also talk about the possibility of establishing a business advisory council in the county. An advisory council would be able to advise small businesses with problems such as filling out government forms.
