FRENCH'S CARE-A-LOT 900 University Oaks 693-1987

Group funds chair in wildlife ecology

The Caesar Kleberg Wildlife Conservation Foundation has presented Texas A&M University a $500,000 endowment for creation of the Caesar Kleberg Chair in wildlife ecology.

Texas A&M President Jarvis E. Miller said the grant will be used to fund a prestigious new professorial position in the Wildlife and Fisheries Sciences Department.

"The Caesar Kleberg foundation has long supported wildlife research in the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and this new chair will enhance the program significantly,"

Miller said.

The Texas Agricultural Experiment Station is a division of the Texas A&M University System.

"This is the first endowed chair in the College of Agriculture, and we think it significant that an outstanding pioneer conservationist should be honored this way."

Dr. Harry Kunkel, dean of the College of Agriculture, said, "The new chair is an opportunity to solidify the department's position of strength among the world's universities with interests in wild animals."

Texas A&M officials announced last month a $17 million fund-raising campaign to endow at least one chair in each of the University's 10 academic or professional colleges and at least one endowed professorship in each of 84 academic departments.

The acting head of the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries Sciences, Dr. Wendell Swank, said the Kleberg chair will enable Texas A&M to seek out an individual of eminence in the field of wildlife ecology.

Dr. Robert Merrifield, associate director of the experiment station, added that a search committee has been formed to review prospects for the position. However, he said that filling the chair will take time.

"This isn't like filling a normal faculty position," he said. "We are looking for the pre-eminent leader in the field to fill this prestigious research and teaching post."

Miller noted Texas A&M has reached a stage in its development where endowed chairs and professorships are essential.

"This would provide the resources to attract even more outstanding professors to the campus," he said.

In the past 12 years, the Caesar Kleberg foundation has been a generous benefactor to Texas A&M, providing more than $3 million in support of wildlife research in addition to this year's endowment of $500,000.
