Mack Skinner, a senior range science major, brands the wall of the Kleberg Center with the "Hash Knife" brand of his father's ranch located near Abilene. Prominent brands from each county in Texas were selected to be put on the wall.

Court rules car checks now improper

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruled 8-1 Tuesday it is a violation of motorists' constitutional rights for state police to stop them at random merely to check their driving licenses and auto registration. In a case from Delaware, Justice Byron White wrote for the majority that unless officers have an articulable and reasonable suspicion that a motorist is unlicensed or as result an automobile is not registered, a stop of either the vehicle or an occupant is otherwise subject to seizure for violation of law. Such stops amount to unreasonable search and seizure barred by the Fourth Amendment.

In other actions, the court: Declined, 5-4, to rule on Los Angeles County's racial quotas for the firemen, concluding that a live controversy no longer exists. Ruled 8-0 the government does not have an implied right to build a road across land originally granted to the Union Pacific Railroad. The high court's decision in the traffic-stop case affirmed a ruling by the Delaware Supreme Court.

Writer finally beats jinx

United Press International LONDON — A London newspaper said Sunday it is going to help Geoff O'Neill beat his jinx. He needs all the help he can get.

O'Neill, 55, has been a prolific writer for 20 years. In that time he has written 501 songs, three stage musicals, a novel, a volume of poetry and assorted short stories.

Not one word ever has been published and not one note ever professionally performed.

"I'm convinced there is a jinx on my musical career," O'Neill told the newspaper Sunday People.

The newspaper said it will see that one of O'Neill's songs, carefully indexed and numbered at his home, will be broadcast on BBC radio next week. O'Neill said he'll be listening.
