Citizen gets IRS refund and surprise

United Press International
PORT ARTHUR — School teacher James Anderson didn't expect a $9,200 tax return from the Internal Revenue Service.
 But that's what he received instead of the $92 that was expected to be coming to him.
 "I was a little bit stunned," said Anderson, 60, who received the refund a week ago but didn't know the number of zeros endorsed it and was on the bank.
 After looking at the check, Anderson decided to be honest and called the district office in Houston.
 The IRS confirmed that the refund had been made and asked Anderson to write "void" across the check and send it back.
