Some students say cheating a must for good grades

United Press International
NEW YORK — Some modern-day collegians have found a new way to cheat: they sneak into computer rooms and tamper with the transcripts.

The Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education says computer dishonesty on the college campus is a "relatively new phenomenon, but one that may be on the rise."

The prestigious council based in Berkeley, Calif., noted in a report issued Wednesday on "Fair Practices in Higher Education" that three UCLA students last year were "caught trying to change their grades by sneaking into the university's computer system."

And a student at Wayne State "learned the password for a university research project and charged $2,000 worth of computer time to it."

Direct Student Loan recipients are in default. The non-repayment rate of the intentionally high-risk veteran's loans is 44 percent.

The report, aiming to advance "educational justice for the post-secondary age group," urged schools and students who attend them "to review ethical conduct on their campuses and correct any that are inconsistent with the highest standards of academic tradition."

The council, headed by Clark Kerr, also recommended that high schools make available to students and parents, consumer education about colleges and universities "early enough to influence student curricular and life choices."

Picturephone exists, but costly

United Press International
BOSTON — Audio-visual telephone service connecting eight major U.S. city areas began Tuesday.

The New England Telephone Co. said the coast-to-coast link-up, known as Picturephone Meeting Service, will include 12 major cities nationwide by the end of the year.

At present, PMS is available in Boston, New York, Washington, Detroit, Atlanta, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles. The basic fee for a Boston-to-Los Angeles call is $6.50 per minute, or $390 an hour.

Company spokesman Ann Bean said while the service may be expensive, it can cut down on long-distance travel by allowing people to talk face-to-face by telephone. "The per hour fee is less than the roundtrip air ticket between the two cities," she said.

"Virtually every aspect of in-person meetings can be duplicated with the service. The system can utilize video tapes, films, transparencies or other types of visual aids in making presentations."

PMS allows six customers in each city to participate in a conference. Individuals are simultaneously filmed and recorded by automatic cameras in a private room.

Bean said PMS will be available to the general public during regular business hours on a first-come, first-served basis.

But computer cheating, the council said, is just one of several signs that ethical conduct is falling apart on the nation's college campuses.

The list of academic "dirty laundry" also includes: —Cheating by students on academic assignments, including buying of research papers. Nearly 9 percent of students report some form of cheating is necessary to get the grades they want. Larger percentages admit resorting to cheating on papers or exams.

—Misuse by students of public financial aid. About 13 percent of loans made under the Guaranteed Student Loan Program are in default and 17 percent of the National

"We are concerned," the council said, "that these negative traits may indicate a larger and more deep-seated problem: a general loss of self-confidence and of a sense of mutual trust, and a general decline in integrity of conduct on campus."

Another sign of trouble cited by the council is an increase in lawsuits threatened or initiated by students.

A council survey in 1978, said these went up at 35 percent of the schools, stayed the same at 51 percent and decreased at 14 percent.
