Tom Valigura prepares for the Biology 219 lab that he teaches three times a week. Valigura received his B.S. in biology in 1976 and has been working as a teacher's assistant under Dr. William P. Fife and Dr. William E. Hoffman, teachers in the Texas U. medical School. Valigura hopes to get his medical degree in December 1979.

A&M artist-in-residence portrays 'modern West'

An exhibit by sculptor George Lundeen is on display in the Langx Gallery on the Texas A&M University campus.

The exhibit, open to the public from charge through May 1, features 20 bronze sculptures by the Texas A&M artist-in-residence.

The Nebraska native describes himself as a western artist, and believes his work represents the western art of today.

Charles Russell and Fredric Remington showed America what the old west was like through their work; George Lundeen is showing the modern west through his.

"I live in the west and that's what I sculpt," Lundeen said.

"I think it's a mistake for an artist to paint or sculpt anything he doesn't know something about," he added. "I know the western area of the United States, so that's where my subjects come from."

Sculpting subjects he's favor comes easy for Lundeen. In the 11 years the former Fulbright Scholar has been sculpting, he has studied art in Italy, worked at a bronze factory in Colorado and taught art in a Nebraska college.

He is currently working out of two studios, has plans for another and is exhibiting work in Dallas, Chicago and Colorado.

In conjunction with his duties as artist-in-residence, he teaches a basic design course and a course in sculpting at Texas A&M.

Langford Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day.

United Press International
NEW YORK — If a smoker's dog develops a cough, its owner may be to blame. An animal's indirect exposure to a human's smoking habit can lead to a runny nose, throat irritations, sneezing and wheezing, says an article in Seventeen magazine.

Dogs are not the only vulnerable pets, the article says. Caged creatures such as birds and hamsters are especially prone to respiratory problems. To protect them, veterinarians recommend good ventilation for the home and plenty of fresh air for pets.

Get a lifelike, spacious sound from a bookshelf speaker. The new Bose® Model 301.

Like other Bose Direct/Reflecting® speaker systems, the Model 301 is designed to capture the spatial realism of live-performance music. A unique Direct Energy Control lets you vary the balance of reflected and direct sound to fit the acoustics of your listening room. Exclusive asymmetrical design gives you optimum performance in stereo reproduction. A new high-performance tweeter delivers smoother-than-ever high-frequency response. Compare the new Model 301 against any bookshelf speaker, regardless of price. You'll discover a dimension of performance you thought impossible from a system of its size and price. Come in today for your personal demonstration.

Balance of reflected and direct sound produces the spatial realism of the new Model 301.
