

One show that didn't go on

The out-of-business Circle Drive-In, at Cross and Nagle streets, is drawing crowds again. Frustrated by the lack of parking places on campus, Aggies have turned to it and other open areas near Texas A&M University. Although a sign near the screen says parking permits are required and may be picked up at the Campus Theater, an employee there says that is no longer true.

Wine medically useful to some, study says

United Press International

San Francisco — A new study indicates wine can be useful in medical diets that restrict sodium consumption and maintain high potassium levels.

Writing in the American Journal of Enology and Viticulture, three California experts said potassium values ranged between 500 and 1,300 milligrams per liter and sodium values, mainly below 100 milligrams per liter.

"The daily requirement for potassium is about two to four grams and that of sodium 0.5 to two grams," said H.W. Berg, M.A. Amerine and Min Akiyoshi. Berg and Amerine are professors emeritus of enology at the University of California, Davis and Akiyoshi is senior winery research scientist. A milligram is one-thousandth of a gram.

It found the average potassium content higher in red than in white table wines, and sodium content lower in whites and roses than in the other types.
