

8,000 attend Aggie Muster — more than a memorial

More than 8,000 people attended the 97th Aggie Muster at Texas A&M University Saturday afternoon.

Above left, Dr. Lee Smith, president of Southwest Texas State University, explains why Muster is more than just a memorial service for Aggies who have died.

The class of '57 graduate said it is a time for them to appreciate their school and rededicate themselves to it — and rekindle old friendships. Smith also spoke at the Texas A&M 100-Year Convocation in 1976.

Top, Former students, current students and the wife of the president of Texas A&M stand silently as six buglers, selected from the Aggie Band, play "Silver Taps" during Muster.

Just before this, the roll was called of students and Brazos County former students who died during the year. After each name, a friend called, "Here."

Left, Hardly a seat was left in G. Rollie White Coliseum Saturday. In fact, some sat on the concrete steps or stood to attend.

Fight back at world with vengeful stickers

United Press International
BOULDER, Colo. — John Hansen claims to have an answer — "creative revenge" — for persons vexed by poor service in restaurants, vending machines that take money but give nothing in return, or the general frustrations of everyday living.

For example, soft drink machine stickers read, "This Machine Steals Money" or "Out of Order Again!" For restaurants whose offerings leave something to be desired, you can plaster the waitress or the table with "Horrible Food" or "Lousy Service" stickers.

Other models include "This Movie Rated Blah" for questionable cinematic efforts; "My Taxes Paid For THIS?" for examples of government foolishness; "Inept Nerd" for general dissatisfaction with a coworker or friend; and "Filthy Restrooms" for dirty service stations.
