

Described as 'well-mannered'

Hillside strangler suspect named

United Press International
LOS ANGELES — A man described as being well-mannered and having a fixation on becoming a policeman is a prime suspect — but perhaps only one suspect — in the "Hillside Strangler" slayings. Kenneth A. Bianchi already faces charges of strangling two women in Washington state and is suspected in 10 of the 13 Los Angeles killings. The killings, mostly of attractive women in their late teens and early 20s who also were sexually molested, terrorized young women in late 1977 and early 1978. The nude bodies of the victims were left sprawled on the slopes of the Hollywood Hills in the northeastern Los Angeles area.

The announcement came Monday from an unusually high-powered team of law enforcement executives — Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl Gates, Los Angeles County Sheriff Peter J. Pitchess and suburban Glendale Police Chief Duane Baker — because the victims were found in all three jurisdictions.

Gates said the announcement did not wrap up the case. "I still believe that in some cases there was more than one individual involved."

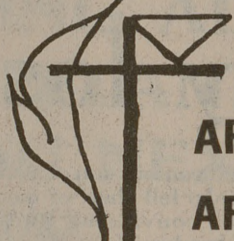

Baker said he had long "been operating under the assumption that more than one man was involved."

Gates named Bianchi's cousin,

Angelo Buono, 44, as a possible second suspect. Buono has not been charged but police have sealed his Glendale home and upholstery shop while they continue a search begun under a warrant last Friday.

Bianchi was arrested three months ago in Bellingham, Wash., where he pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the stranglings of two Western Washington University coeds.

"We now believe we have a case put together," Gates said. "The evidence will support the fact that Kenneth Bianchi is involved in seven murders in the city of Los Angeles, two under sheriff's jurisdiction and one in Glendale."

One killed by blaze in rest home

WASHINGTON — A fire at a nursing home Tuesday morning killed one resident and injured several others, the latest in a series of fires at Washington nursing homes and similar facilities that have killed 10 people and injured dozens.

Police said the fire broke out on the eighth floor of the Roosevelt Senior Citizens' Home about 7 a.m. The blaze, confined to that floor, was extinguished in a half-hour.

One unidentified resident was killed, and police said several residents were hospitalized with what were believed to be minor injuries.

On April 11, nine residents of a halfway house for mental patients were killed in a fire. Two days later a blaze at a nursing home killed an elderly resident. Last Thursday more than 30 students were injured, two of them critically, in a fire at a George Washington University dormitory.

Haig stresses need for leader

NEW YORK — Retiring NATO commander Gen. Alexander Haig says the United States must develop a "new kind of post-Vietnam leadership" in world affairs, but he won't say if he wants to do the leading.

In an address to the 93rd annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, Haig repeatedly stressed the need Monday for the United States to develop a new kind of global leadership.

He said the nation should begin by putting the Vietnam War behind.

"Our experiences in Southeast Asia are over," Haig said. "The mesmerizing preoccupation with these experiences is over. We must develop a new kind of post-Vietnam leadership."

"America must continue to lead, but lead in a far more sophisticated manner," Haig said. "The days are gone when America could move in and out of a conflict and bring about a result that would be in the interests of the Western world."

But Haig later sidestepped questions on whether he thought he should be the man to do the leading.

"I'm very conscious of the role the professional militarist in public life," said Haig, who has been mentioned as a possible presidential candidate. He will leave his command post in Europe in June.

"I'm wary about men on horseback entering politics," he said. "However, I have not made any decisions about the future and will not until I complete my tour of duty."

In his ANPA address, Haig there was a "continued inability of Western political leaders to deal with the contradiction of dealing with the Soviet Union and their military needs."

"There has been a relative growth in sheer Soviet military power in the last 15 years," he said, and the Russians have bases stretching from Afghanistan to South Korea "that could snuff out the life of the Western world" — oil.

He also said the United States should strengthen ties with China because Peking's leaders were interested in "strategic reality" and would endure "just so many disappointments from the Western world" about closer links.

Haig's troubled picture of world affairs was echoed by three United Press International correspondents who addressed the convention Tuesday.

James Anderson, who covers the State Department in Washington, said the peace treaty between Iraq and Egypt has created an unexpected anti-Soviet alliance in the Middle East.

Joseph W. Grigg of UPI's London bureau said there are fears in Western Europe that the United States would not risk nuclear war should the Soviet Union decide to overrun the area.

Alan Dawson of UPI's Bangkok bureau spoke of an aggressive Vietnam defying China in seeking control of Southeast Asia, while the United States remained fearful of Soviet encroachment.

Chili cook-off, play to benefit KAMU radio

Chili cooks and eaters and comedy and theater fans all will have a chance this month to help KAMU-FM, Texas A&M University's public radio station.

The Third Annual Chili Fest and the Brazos Valley Spring Bluegrass Concert, set for Saturday, and special performance of "The Sunshine Boys," today will benefit KAMU-FM during the last week of April.

StageCenter, Bryan-College Station's community theater group will present "The Sunshine Boys," Neil Simon comedy concerning the reunion of the famous vaudeville team of Lewis and Clark for a television special. Curtain for the special performance will be at 8 p.m., with tickets in the form of a $3 donation to KAMU-FM.

The chili fest and bluegrass concert will be on Dilly Shaw Road, 2.6 miles north of the Taylor Road junction. The daylong event will feature a Terlingua-sans-serif chili cooking contest and the bluegrass concert, in addition to an madillo beauty contest, arm wrestling, frog jumping and other contests and games.

More than 75 teams have registered for the chili cooking contest.
