House approves bill
aiding crime victims

United Press International
AUSTIN — The House Thursday approved a bill providing compensation to crime victims despite objections the measure is unconstitutional and creates a state-subsidized insurance program.

The bill, which already has cleared the Senate, would set up a special fund from which the Industrial Accident Board would dispense payments to victims of violent crime. Revenue for the fund would be generated by adding $15 to the fines of convicted felons and $10 for persons convicted of Class A or B misdemeanors.

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, said opponents' arguments that the state would eventually have to subsidize the fund were faulty.

"The victim's needs in one form or another are paid by the state as it is. Why not make the criminals pay for it?" Schlueter said.

Rep. Bob Maloney, R-Dallas, argued the bill would create an un-needed philosophy in state government.

"This begins the philosophy of state-subsidized insurance, insurance this Legislature will eventually have to fund. This is a welfare bill," he said.

Maloney also said the constitution forbids the state to grant money to individuals, unless directed to do so under a constitutional amendment.

Rep. Gerald Geistweidt, R-Mason, said the bill would create an "open breeding ground for fraud."

A handful of liberal senators used stalling tactics to delay for more than an hour approval of a revision of state strip mining regulations, but conceded the target of their stall was a series of other bills awaiting Senate consideration.

"We got an agreement to delay a number of bills until Monday," said Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, one of those involved in the delaying tactics.

"This just gives us a little more time to work on the bills and round up our votes against them." The Senate approved and sent to the House two bills by Sen. Price, R-Pampa, authorizing use of state funds to construct a plant for production of alcohol use as a motor fuel in a million gasoline.

Price's bills would authorize Texas Energy Advisory Commission contract for construction of a plant called "gasohol" plant, and the fuel it produces.

Funding for the project approved as part of the general appropriation bill for the next year, however, before it can be implemented.

The Senate also approved a bill by Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth, authorizing Tarrant County to decide if they want to close the offices of county treasurer and county auditor.

The House also gave approval to a bill exempting wind-powered energy devices from ad valorem taxation and authorizing cities to take control of kept cemeteries.

Collection of solar energy hinders its use, expert says

United Press International
NEW YORK — The energy in sunlight falling on the U.S. each day is about twice the nation's annual consumption of energy from conventional sources, according to one energy expert.

"The difficulty with solar power is that it is diffused over the world's surface," explained Herman Kamp, president of General Utilities Corporation.

Although sun eventually will supply important amounts of energy, hot water and space heating, it is doubtful that it will provide significant amounts of our total energy needs, since cost may well be a deciding factor, he said.
