

Dorm names, curfew advised

By CATHY TERRELL
Battalion Reporter

Emory Bellard and Jack Williams have been selected for the names of two new women's dorms by the Residence Hall Association.

The RHA also turned in a recommendation to extend dorm visitation hours.

"We just decided to take a vote at our last meeting April 19," Barbara Thompson, RHA president said.

Bellard, Texas A&M University's former football coach and Jack Williams, former chancellor were among names suggested by RHA members.

Thompson said that she didn't know if anything would be done with the vote results.

Ron Sasse, associate director of Student Affairs, said that he did not receive the vote results.

Sasse said he does not know when the names will be decided or how they will be decided.

"I am not familiar with the procedures for naming a new dorm," Sasse said. "I hope to be informed soon, so we can stop calling them dormular."

Sasse said he imagined some former students will have a say in the decision.

The RHA also presented a three-part proposal recommending extension of dormitory visitation hours to the Office of Student Affairs for consideration.

The proposal is based on a random survey of 1,200 to 1,400 dorm residents last semester.

The survey was conducted by the RHA and the marketing department.

Results of the survey showed 67 percent in favor of lowering weekday visitation to 10 a.m., 62 percent favoring visitation until 11 p.m., and 64 percent wanting 24-hour weekend visitation.

The first part of the proposal recommends that visitation be allowed to start at 10 a.m. instead of the current time of noon.

Secondly, dorms could vote to extend visitation until 11 p.m. week-nights instead of 10 p.m.

The proposal also recommends allowing 24-hour visitation on the weekends.

Weekend hours now extend from 10 a.m. until 1:30 a.m.

"The proposal suggests what students want," Thompson said.

If the proposal is passed, it does not guarantee that a residence hall will automatically follow the policy. It will make the new visitation hours possible for the dorms that want it.

"Each Dorm Council would vote to determine visitation hours for its dorm," Thompson said.

The proposal has been turned in to Sasse's office. His staff will look it over, add suggestions, then give it to him, he said.

Sasse will also look over the proposal and add comments before giving it to Ron Blatchley.

"My staff has a hectic last three weeks of school," Sasse said. "I don't know when they will begin looking over the proposal."

After being reviewed by the Student Affairs Office, the proposal will go to John Koldus, vice-president for Student Services, then to President Jarvis E. Miller, and the Board of Regents.

"I don't know what weight the proposal will have on the administration," Thompson said. "It is possible that only one or two parts of the proposal will be approved."

Two Aggies win concrete canoeing

By RICHARD OLIVER
Battalion Staff

Take heart, Aggies. At least one man from your University won something over the weekend. The Texas A&M American Society of Civil Engineers is now the national champion in men's concrete canoeing.

The men's team of Bruce Carr and Scott Holman, racing against 40 competitors, won the competition, held in Manhattan, Kan., going away. In the meantime, they shaved three seconds off the national record with a winning time of two minutes and 14 seconds.

The ASCE won second place overall with 33 points, behind the University of Kansas, which had 43.

Besides the men's team, the Aggies were paced by a second place showing by the faculty team of Dr. Edward Furr and Professor Mike Higgins.

Tom Hooper, vice-president of ASCE, was disappointed with the performance.

"It was a real shame that we didn't win the team championship," he said. "We were disappointed because we clearly would have won the whole thing except that we were disqualified for two disqualifications, both against the eventual winners, the University of Kansas."

The disqualifications occurred when an Aggie canoe bumped University of Kansas canoes from behind while making 180-degree turns.

Hooper said the disqualifications were fairly called, and the infractions automatically allow the team which was interfered with to advance to the next round, and thus receive more points.

"Those infractions may well have been the turning point," said Hooper. "In both races that we were called for interference in the men's competition, we ended up really smashing the University of Kansas team."

Hooper said each race was 1000 feet long, and consisted of two 500-foot stretches with a 180-degree turn at the midpoint.

"Another thing that really hindered us was the fact that although we had the fastest canoes in the competition, they were the longest, which really caused problems at the turn. At times, we were almost dead still trying to turn them around."

Hooper is optimistic about next year.

"We're looking forward to next year to sweep," he said. "There will be a lot of testing to be done, and we'll be back to win it all."
