Clements signs tax relief bill

United Press International
AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements has signed a bill implementing the Tax Relief Amendment" citizens had approved last November. A spokesman in the governor's office said Clements had signed the bill, which was a compromise of a House-Senate conference committee, without ceremony over the weekend.

Under the bill all resident homeowners will get a $5,000 exemption from school district taxes, and homeowners over 65 will be eligible for an additional $10,000 property tax exemption.

The measure also calls for all farmland, ranch and timber land to be taxed on its productivity rather than on its market value.

Vet school starts four-year program beginning in the fall

BY KEITH TAYLOR
Battalion Staff

The Texas A&M University College of Veterinary Medicine is joining the rest of the University in a four-year education program beginning the fall semester of 1979.

The college has been on a three-year trimester program since 1964. "There are many reasons for the change," said Dr. Wallace Bay, associate dean of the college.

"We want to slow down the pace for the students. We want to give them an opportunity to reflect on what they have been studying. This will give them more time to think, develop thoughts, and put together the two. Also it will give them an opportunity to work with a veterinarian during the summer months."

The 138 students entering the college in the fall will be divided into two groups. One group will pursue the three-year program and the other will start the four-year plan at the end of their sophomore year.

The class will be divided to phase in the four-year program, Bay said.

The first class to go completely through the four-year program will be the students entering in the fall of 1980.

The new program has been planned for several years, but the veterinary school administration only recently reached finalization of the plan, he said.

The new plan will probably help extend research opportunities because of the open summer, Bay said. The smaller number of students in the summer will allow professors and senior students more time to work on research projects.

The current program gives the students three weeks vacation in December and August and one week off in April.

Senior students will continue to have staggered vacation periods with the four-year program.

Surveys were taken of student, faculty, and former students, Bay said. The majority in all the surveys were in favor of the change, he said.

The Board of Regents approved the new program at their meeting May 22.
