Carter seeks support for energy program

United Press International
BALTIMORE — President Carter rode a train from Washington to Baltimore Tuesday and visited a solar-power house on East Biddle Street to press support for his energy program.
Carter also promised in a speech to work hard to improve the nation's passenger train system by pushing Congress to lift federal regulations from railroads.
"Shape Up Jimmy" was the banner headline which greeted the president on the front page of the Baltimore News American afternoon newspaper. The story included man-on-the street comments about Carter.

But his live greeting was loud and enthusiastic.
"There's no way for them to embargo the sunshine," Carter said, pointing to solar panels atop the East Biddle Street brick home of Genitha Rhyne and drawing cheers from a crowd of more than 2,000 persons gathered outside.
He referred to the threat of any cut-off of imported oil.
Making another of his forays to meet Americans on their home ground, A 60-seat coach car was added to the Amtrak metroliner train for Carter, his wife and a crowd of government officials and reporters to make the 40-mile trip. It took less than 40 minutes and the train arrived in Baltimore at 8:36 a.m. EDT.
"I recommend this kind of trip to every American regardless of national background," he told the convention. "Trains have always been a truly American way to travel."

"I am determined to improve America's railway system. I want to demonstrate that trains represent the future and not the past in transportation in America," he told the Italian Americans.
He pressed the group, which has heavy political clout, to help him get Congress to further deregulate federal control of the railroad industry.
"In recent years, there have been too many bankruptcies, too many terminations of rail service to a great degree brought about by government regulations," Carter said.
"Amtrak must be more efficient, more comfortable and more economical."
Earlier, the president toured the Rhyne house and implored an enthusiastic crowd gathered outside to save energy and to pressure Congress on behalf of his energy program.
"I want you to make sure that Congress cooperates with me. We and the Congress will cooperate with you," he said.
After his convention speech, Carter answered questions from those in the audience. He said he:
—Will make sure that "adequate fuel" is provided for the populous northeast this winter.
—Is confident that the people of Italy will not allow their government to be dominated by communists.
—Hopes to conclude negotiations on purchase of Mexico's natural gas next month when he meets in Washington with President Lopez Portillo.
—Thinks the proposed new Department of Education will help reduce government involvement in private schools.

U.S.-Mexican petroleum talks slated

United Press International
BALTIMORE — President Carter said Tuesday he will meet in Washington next month with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo to discuss U.S. oil and natural gas purchases from Mexico.
The two leaders discussed energy problems last February in Mexico City and said afterward they would meet again in late summer at some city along the U.S.-Mexican border.

former Lt. Gov. William Winter and Jim Herring — are rated a tossup to get into an Aug. 28 runoff berth with her.
Polls opened at 7 a.m. and will close at 6 p.m. CDT.
Two wealthy Republicans — Gil Carmichael of Meridian and Leon Bramlett of Clarksdale — are featured in the GOP governor's contest.
Gov. Cliff Finch is prohibited by law from succeeding himself.
The campaign has been largely centered on personalities, with few issues in discussion.
Gandy has been in Mississippi

Woman leads state race

United Press International
JACKSON, Miss. — A frail, 58-year-old woman with 30 years experience in government led a field of Democratic candidates into the Mississippi gubernatorial primary Tuesday.
About 700,000 Mississippians expected to cast ballots on long lists of state, county and district hopefuls in various other primary elections.
Lt. Gov. Evelyn Gandy, trying to become the state's first woman governor, is the acknowledged front-runner among Democrats. Three of the five men — John Arthur Eaves, politics since the late 1940s, and has emphasized her experience in government.

She is a former legislator, an ex-aide to Theodore Bilbo, and has served as commissioner of public welfare, assistant attorney general, state treasurer and insurance commissioner.
Eaves, a Jackson attorney and former legislator, was expected to grab rural votes with his campaign pledges to return prayer to the schools and his use of a gospel music band at his campaign stops.

Eaves received the surprise endorsement of civil rights leader Charles Evers.
The slightly graying Winter, Jackson attorney, has been an emerging figure on the state's campaign trails for more than 30 years. Winter was unsuccessful in attempts to win the governor's office in 1967 and 1975.
Herring a former district attorney, has been campaigning for the top office since his defeat in the 1975 lieutenant governor's race.
