Thousands bid last farewell

Mountbatten paid tribute

United Press International
LONDON — Britain bade farewell to Earl Mountbatten of Burma Wednesday with a majestic funeral parade through the ancient center of London to Westminster Abbey, where a grieving Queen Elizabeth and royalty from a dozen nations paid final tribute to the warrior-statesman.

Ironically, Mountbatten, victim of an IRA bomb, was closely guarded in death than in life. Scotland Yard mounted an unprecedented security operation, between 4,000 and 5,000 police troops guarding the funeral and the Abbey, where more than 100,000 people gathered there since the death of King George VI in 1952.

Mountbatten's coffin, draped the Union Jack with his cocked miral's hat and gold stick, symbol protector of the queen, made journey to the Abbey about 10 miles. Five princes naved in its funeral path and tens of thousands of Britons lined the sun-drenched streets for a final glimpse of the "Lionel Lincoln."

Mountbatten, 79, his 15-year-old grandson and two other people were killed when an IRA bomb blew their fishing boat off the west coast of Ireland 10 days ago.

The man the royal family affectionately called "Uncle Dickie" was the uncle of Prince Philip, the cousin of the queen. A strong believer in tradition and duty, he planned his own funeral years ago as Winston Churchill had done for him.

The procession to the 900-year-old Abbey included, at Mountbatten's request, more than 100 servicemen and women and groups of survivors from his battles against the IRA, including the destroyer Kelly and military engineers from five nations, including the United States.

Mountbatten, Supreme Commander in Southeast Asia during World War II, avoided contact with Japan who did not send a representative.

The royal pageantry in Britain excels was illustrated in extent perhaps not seen since the funeral in 1965.

Solemn-faced, Prince Philip, Prince Charles, both in full uniform, marched behind the funeral gun carriage with the Duke of Gloucester, the Duke of Kent and Prince Michael of Kent and Mountbatten's grandsons.

With his boots reversed in stirrups, the symbol of a leader, Mountbatten's black horse Dolly followed riderless.

Queen Elizabeth, in black, led the royal family arrived at the Abbey by car, taking a side road from Buckingham Palace so as to detract from the funeral parade.

Accompanied by a trumpet fanfare, muffled Abbey bells as the procession arrived. Mountbatten's coffin was carried on a catafalque.

Prince Charles, his voice firm as he read the lesson of the 107th Psalm, beginning, "That go down to the sea in ships,"

Kings, queens, princes and princesses, a grand duke and duchess and the father of the king of the Netherlands, led the 2,500 mourners. Mountbatten, a great-grandson of Queen Victoria, was related to the royal houses of Europe.

Clements Miller to Hungary

United Press International
BUDAPEST, Hungary — Bill Clements of Texas and 30 farmers and agricultural experts, including Texas A&M University president Jarvis Miller, travel to Hungary Wednesday for the first stop on their current European tour.

"We had a very interesting tour of Hungary and we were particularly impressed by the results of the agricultural experts obtained in running a state farm at Babolna," said Ford, a member of the U.S. Agricultural Mission.

Babolna, 100 miles west of Budapest, is Hungary's biggest state farm and was built on the basis of experience made in the United States, Hungarian agricultural experts said.

"Apparently Babolna was a success, because it developed Hungary's biggest farm," Ford said.

Ford explained that the group was on a people-to-people mission with no intention of influencing any government officials during their tour through Europe.

"We met many interesting people and had fruitful talks during our tour in Hungary," Ford said, before departing for Czechoslovakia with Clements and his group will not be until the end of the week before proceeding to the Soviet Union.

One day before their departure from Hungary, the Americans visited a collective state farm near Budapest and had talks with members of the Hungarian National Association for Agricultural Cooperatives.

The Hungarian press did not report on the activities of Clements and his group as their visit was considered private and not official.
