

Told BYU game crucial

Grid club kicks off

If this was next Monday I could tell you a whole lot more about our football team for 1979," Head Coach Tom Wilson answered a question Thursday night. He was addressing the fall's first meeting of the Student Aggie Club.

About 110 people heard Wilson and the four 1979 season team captains, Jacob Green, Carl Grulich, Curtis Dickey and Ed Pustejovsky, give a few insights on the coming season.

Wilson said, "The players came back with a good attitude, we had a good summer program and the discipline has been strict but they've stuck with us. These young men have really worked hard and when they go on the field, I know they'll play hard."

The Student Aggie Club was formed four years ago. Its dues help pay for athletic scholarships at Texas A&M and for special services for members.

In accordance with its motto "$12 from the 12th Man," yearly dues are $12.

The club charters buses to travel to out-of-town athletic events and has chartered planes to go to some football games. The main event the club sponsors each year is the Senior All-Sports Banquet honoring graduating senior athletes from all sports. The club is open to any student at Texas A&M who is interested in the support of the school's athletics.

Asked about the first game with Brigham Young University on Saturday, Coach Wilson said, "They pose a problem for a first ballgame."

He said they are a very dangerous and versatile team much like the Dallas Cowboys. "Once you think you've got 'em figured out they switch on you."

"We will be needing tailback Curtis Dickey to carry the ball 30 to 35 times a game to get the job done this season," Wilson said. George Woodard, another part of the running game, is still having knee problems, so he'll probably not see much action in Saturday's game with BYU. "I know that if we needed him now, though, he could play," said Wilson.

Wilson said the kicking game is hurting in all areas and that a consistency needs to be found in starter David Appleby or second team punter Doug Dotter. He said the team also lacked depth this year but is not devoid of it. There are some good back-up men on the team, Wilson said.

Tour views Czechoslovakia

United Press International
PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Gov. Bill Clements of Texas and his group of 38 U.S. agricultural experts, including President Jarvis Miller of Texas A&M University, started their visit to Czechoslovakia Thursday with an extensive tour through the historical heart of Prague.

"We have thoroughly enjoyed a visit to all the historical sights of Prague," Clements said. "It was an important part of our tour, as it gave us a feeling for the country and its people."

The group arrived Wednesday night from Hungary, the first country on their current European tour.

They will go to the Soviet Union at the end of this week.

"Everyone has been very friendly and cooperative here," Clements said. "We have all the opportunities to talk to the people and get acquainted with life in Czechoslovakia."

After their sightseeing tour through Prague, the group went to the U.S. Embassy for a full briefing on various aspects of Czechoslovakia's role in Eastern Europe.

Clements said his group will visit several collective state farms near Prague today before getting ready for its trip to the Soviet Union at the end of this week.

Portillo will visit Carter this month

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo will visit Washington Sept. 28-29 for a long-planned meeting with President Carter, the White House announced Wednesday.

In a one-sentence statement, the White House said the two presidents will meet "to review bilateral and international issues and to strengthen U.S.-Mexican relations." The meeting is scheduled at a time when the two countries are engaged in tough negotiations over Mexican oil and the problem of undocumented Mexican workers in the United States.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, at a news conference Wednesday, denied the natural gas talks have broken down and noted Deputy Secretary Warren Christopher is in Mexico for the negotiations.

Vance said the discussions about undocumented workers are "proceeding at a pace and in a fashion which is satisfactory to both our countries."

The neighbor nations also are at odds over a continuing oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico which among other places polluted the beaches and many fishing grounds in Texas. U.S. officials believe Mexico should help pay for that clean up. Mexican officials so far have refused and the United States has threatened to take them to court.

Vance, at his news conference, called the oil spill incident "one of those events that happens in the relationships between two countries."

Who stole the whiskey? Who in the hall cares?

United Press International

COLLINSVILLE, Okla. — A dispute between the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars that involves whiskey as well as the local meeting hall is going to be decided by the Tulsa District Court.

The dispute began when Legion members claimed VFW members burglarized the Legion's bar, taking whiskey and cigarettes. VFW officials said, however, the missing whiskey and cigarettes were not stolen because the VFW owned the bar.

As a result, the VFW announced it wanted to sell its half of the shared meeting hall and build one of its own. Officials offered to sell out to the Legion, but Legion officials claimed the VFW didn't own any part of the building.

Earl L. Shawver, past VFW post commander, said the "building was donated by two old women to the VFW and Legion before they died."

Gene Fuller, Legion post commander, said, "They (the VFW) want us to buy air. They don't own half or any part of this building to start with."

The VFW filed a district court lawsuit asking the court to declare mutual ownership of the building. A hearing on that suit will be held Monday.

"This is the only big building in town," said local resident Mrs. Kathryn Cummins. "The VFW wants to sell it so they can build their own place outside of town to drink whiskey."

The VFW wants $35,000 for the half it claims.
