As a precaution, Wilson was fitted with a flak jacket similar to the one worn by the Houston Oilers' quarterback Dan Pastorini.

After the game, Wilson removed the jacket and found out that one side of the inflated protector had

"It popped when Jacob Green hit me once," Wilson said. "Why doesn't someone take this over and tell Jacob he owes us $300.

Brigham Young quarterback Marc Wilson prepares to fire one of 35 passes he threw against the Aggies Saturday night. Wilson wore a flak jacket to protect his ribs and stomach. The jacket probably kept Wilson in the game as Aggie defensive end Jacob Green continually hounded and pounded him Battalion photo by Lee Roy Leschper Jr
