

Rape

If the victim is considering prosecution, she should call the Student Legal Adviser. It is important that she not destroy any evidence by changing clothes or bathing.

"A woman's only evidence is her body," Hope said. "Even brushing her hair or going to the bathroom can destroy evidence."

After the medical examination, the counselor will help the woman prepare a written transcript of what happened while it is still fresh in her mind.

discussion in which University Police Chief McDonald and other members talked about rape prevention. They said a woman should:

- Always have her keys in her hand when she walks to the car.
- Always check the back seat before getting into the car.
- Keep doors locked at all times.
- Use only her initials in mailbox and telephone listings.

—Avoid walking alone.

Most important, women at Texas A&M should be aware that they are not immune to the dangers of possible rape simply because they live in a college town.

Although a woman can't spend her life cringing in fear every time she sees a man, it is wise to be cautious — especially if she is alone.

A&M chosen to administer scholarship

The director of the Legislative Budget Board has chosen Texas A&M University to award a scholarship which has been established in his name.

Thomas M. Keel was chosen the 1979 honoree of the Texas State Business Administrators' Association in that group's annual meeting in Corpus Christi. A $600 scholarship was named for him. Keel named Texas A&M as his choice to administer the scholarship.

Fellowships established for minorities

The Committee on Institutional Cooperation has provided funding for two fellowship programs designed to allow more members of minority groups to work towards doctorates in social sciences and the humanities.

Anyone who has a bachelor's degree or will receive one by September, 1980, is eligible to apply for the 1980 competition. The fellowships may be used at any Big Ten conference university or at the University of Chicago.

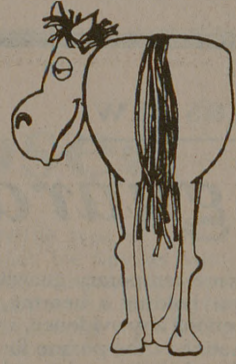

Students may apply by writing CIC Minorities Fellowship Program, Kirkwood Hall 111, Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana 47405.

Real estate internships available

A national grant/internship program for sophomores, juniors and seniors interested in a professional real estate career has been announced by the United Farm Agency, Inc., national real estate firm.

Applicants should be degree-seeking students of business or economics. Students selected will receive a stipend of $2,000 to defray expenses during the 10-week internship. The program also includes an expense-paid, five-day pre-internship training program at the agency's national headquarters in Kansas City, Mo.

Full details and applications have been made available to the Texas A&M University school of business.
