Beach Boys tickets go on sale today

By MIKE BURRICHTER
Battalion Reporter

G. Rollie White Coliseum will be the site of a surfing safari on September 30 when the Beach Boys cruise in for a concert.

Tickets go on sale today at Rudder Tower. Prices are $8.50, $9.25 and $9.75. The lines were long by Sunday, but 5,600 general admission seats are available.

The Beach Boys, one of the few American groups that surfed safely through the tidal wave of British talent that invaded the U.S. in the mid-sixties, are the first of several big groups that Town Hall has signed to perform for this semester's concert repertoire at Texas A&M University.

Mel Tillis will appear in concert on Oct. 12 and Pablo Cruise is scheduled for an Oct. 20 concert date. Town Hall has also booked four Broadway shows to perform at G. Rollie White sometime during the semester.

A campus-wide survey last spring indicated that students would be willing to pay more for concert tickets in order to see bigger performers. This and the student senate's decision last semester to cut Town Hall's budget by $20,500 have brought about a change in the method of selling tickets for these events.

In the past, students could buy season tickets which would enable them to attend every concert that semester for a set price. This left Town Hall in an inflexible position when it came to contract negotiations with performers.

Michelle Scudder, chairman of Town Hall, said this year option passes were sold for $10 apiece. An option pass, she said, enables the student to purchase his tickets the week before tickets went on sale to the rest of the school.

She said the option pass has enabled Town Hall to get bigger and better performers for this semester's program.

Town Hall sold 1,300 option passes in August, she said. They are no longer on sale.

"The Beach Boys concert is the biggest event ever put on by Town Hall," Scudder said. "With this new ticket selling method we hope to get some other big performers."

Scudder said the Beach Boys scored very high in last semester's survey.

The ticket line for their started forming Friday. Mark Churilla, a sophomore wildlife and fisheries sciences major, was the first in line at 11 a.m.

Churilla has designated himself the official roll-caller for other students who have decided to camp out for tickets.

"Every three hours we call roll," he said. "If someone hasn't shown up, we cross him off the list and everyone moves up a notch."

Churilla has been the roll caller for the last four concerts. He says he's trying to start another Aggie tradition.

This time, Churilla brought his stereo and has been playing Beach Boys music throughout the weekend.

Off-Campus Center organizing car pool

By MARGARET JOHNSON
Battalion Reporter

There is an answer to the parking problems on the Texas A&M University campus this fall: car pooling.

The Off-Campus Center of the Department of Student Affairs is initiating a Car Pool Referral Service to all off-campus students.

This service will not only save gas and wear and tear on automobiles, but time spent hunting parking spaces as well.

To register for car pooling, students may file their name, address, class schedule, and whether they need a ride or riders at the recep-tionist's desk at the Off-Campus Center. Cards will then be filed for student reference.

Students may choose their own car pool according to their time schedule and area in which they live.

"As soon as we have more students registered, we'll have a color coded map and file box. The different colors will represent the different zones," said Dena Todd, Off-Campus adviser.

Special car pool parking stickers are available at the University Police Station for $36 and will be valid until August, 1980. This set amount will be divided by each member of the car pool, and in turn each car will receive a separate blue and white parking sticker.

In addition to the parking permits, one registration card will also be issued to the group. This card is to be displayed on the dashboard of the car driven to school. Any vehicles with car pool stickers which fail to display the card when they are parked on campus will be ticketed.

Underclassmen who have pooled together with upperclassmen may park in the blue-coded lots, provided they have the appropriate parking sticker and card.

Persons interested in car pooling will need to register in the Off-Campus Center, located in the Puryear Lounge across from the YMCA Building, or call 845-1741.

U.S. approves China flight

United Press International
WASHINGTON — The government has approved the first direct commercial flights from the United States to China in 30 years.

The Civil Aeronautics Board Friday approved six charter flights from San Francisco to Shanghai, to begin Dec. 3.

They were arranged under an agreement between Pan American World Airways and the General

Administration of Civil Aviation in China.

Previously, the only direct flights were charters for especially interested groups such as the U.S. ping-pong team that played a Chinese tour several years ago.

Commercial charters that flew into China during the past years have not been direct.

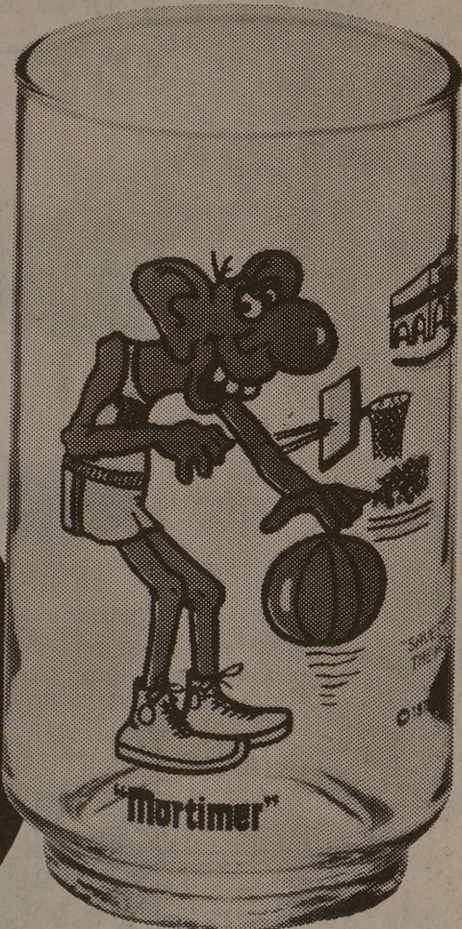

Booking on the flights is available through travel agents.
