

McDONALD'S INTRAMURAL HIGHLIGHTS

At University Drive

At Manor East Mall

B-2 Outscores Sq. 3-B

B-2 squelched Sq. 3-B with some good offense and a hot defense. Although the game appeared balanced to an on-looker, the victory was B-2 20-0 over Sq. 3-B.

Sq. 3-B could not get their momentum going until late in the first half. Greg Royce, as quarterback, made good use of his top receivers, but couldn't make the big play. Jim Edge, Don Galvin, Charlie Foster and Rick Harvey caught some good passes only to be halted by the B-2 defense.

B-2 rolled to a start... then kept on truckin! Greg Neal, as quarterback, completed throw after throw to his receivers. They avoided penalties as Bryan Marshall, Bryan Collier and John Rables galloped down the field. Although Zane Saxon and Greg Royce made several tackles for Sq. 3-B, the big play came when Mike Steege stopped the extra point play after B-2's first touchdown.

B-2 continued to make the big plays and avoid penalties. Then defense shone in the last half with two interceptions and a quarterback sack by Mike Thatche. David Mayer sprinting for 3 tackles. Glen Rokin, Brad Frikley, Jeff Etter and Glen Kolin were other valuable defensive players. The touchdowns were scored by Bryan Collier, Gary Hipps and Bryan Marshall.

Sq. 3-B did have a moment of glory in the first half with a surprise run by Royce pushing for 30 yards. Bad luck set in on Sq. 3-B again as David Moyer harried Zane Saxon into stops and errors. Several valuable defensive players for Sq. 3 were Mike Fosson and Rich Harvey.

Other players for the teams included Robin Glen, Brad Fribley, and Mark Barrigan for B-2 and; Sq. 3, Phil Hannah, Bruce Mueller and Paul Plowman.

The "I Spy" Photographer for this week selects Jon Heidtke as the Intramural participant to be eligible for a B.O.G. card for free food from McDonalds. Jon is shown here intercepting a pass in a game between the Boozers and Dillygaf.

Job Opening

The Intramural Office has openings for qualified life guards. Applicants MUST hold an American Red Cross Advanced Life Guard and Water Safety Certification. The job requires conscientious and responsible people. Salary rate is $2.90 per hour. Shifts available to work during the following hours: Monday through Friday: 1:00-1:30, 3:30-6:00 and weekends 1:00-6:00 p.m. Especially interested in people with life guarding experience, First Aid Certification, or scuba and diving experience. Will consider all qualified applicants.

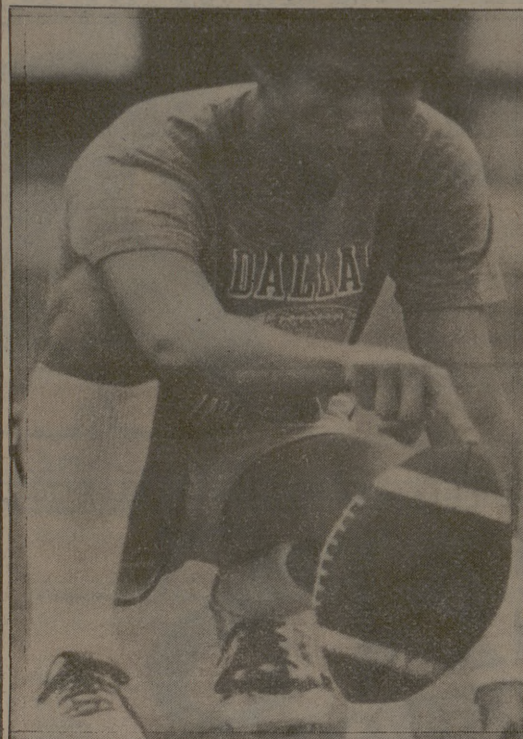

Where Were You, Charlie Brown?

Charlie Brown sure missed a good thing when he didn't show up for the field goal kicking contest. (Someone else could have held the ball for him).

The congratulations, however, go to Men's Champ, Don Kuhlman and Women's Winner Debra Minifee. Also a tip of the hat to the runners-up.

Neb: Chris Langford, John Heye, John Rytel, Fred Nunnery, Kurt Brescall, Greg Hutchinson, Tom Garnier.

Women: Pam Matthews and Brenna Kerns. Forty-six people competed in the contest.

There were several methods used in the Intramural Field Goal Kicking contest, some more unusual than others. When the yardage was added up, Donald Kuhlmann was declared the winner.

Sports Shorts

If you crossed football and basketball, you would come up with what is called flickerball. Entries open today and close next Tuesday. It's exciting, fast, and lots of fun; so come on down to the IM Office and sign up. There is a $5.00 entry fee per team.

Well, football fans, here's another special event designed with you in mind. What can it be? It's Punt, Pass and Kick of course. Entries open today. Try your arm and leg at breaking some IM records. We're waiting for you at the sign-up counter. This activity is free.

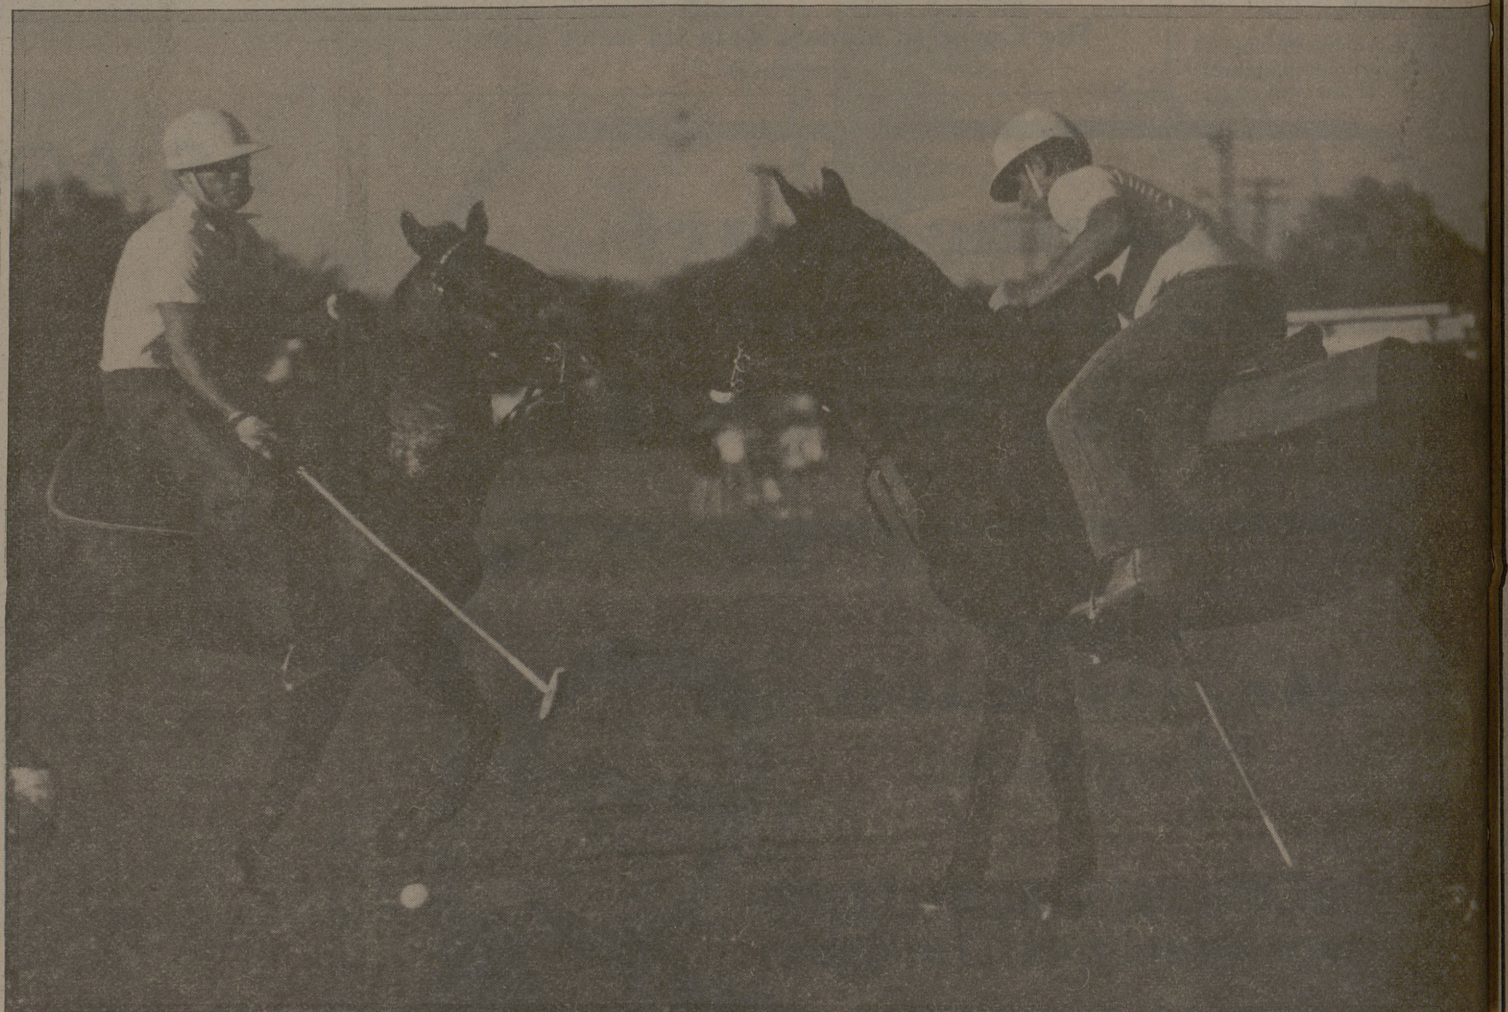

Spish, splash, quick flash... it's the annual Swimming and Diving Contest. One of the most popular events, it's great for spectators and participants alike. It's IM spectacular. Come break it by signing up at the Office at DeWare Field House. This activity is free.

In The Saddle

Standing at the polo field on a Sunday afternoon, you might think you were at Yale or Harvard, but no... A&M play polo, too. The Extramural Club was started in 1968 with the help of Dr. O. D. Butler with only three horses. It's come a long way since then, says, coach Mike McClary who used to play on the team back then. McClary has been coaching the team since 1971. A&M was 4th in the National Intercollegiate in 1974 and last spring was beaten in the semi-finals by Cal-Davis, the ultimate intercollegiate champs. Among the teams that play for the intercollegiate title are York College (Canada), Norwich Military Academy, Cornell, Harvard and Yale. The team plays only one university team during its season because t.u. is the only other school who plays polo. Most of the teams are made up of professional people who play for sport and exercise. They are also extremely competitive and spend a lot of money on effort. The club keeps in touch with former players by inviting them to a former student's match at the present team. Many of alumni only play polo in once-a-year game, while others keep up with their skills by playing as much as possible. The team is evenly-matched on wins.

The Horse Polo team members take part in several drills in preparation for competition.

Caught In The Action

Caught in the action this week is Karen Coleman, an ID checker for Intramurals. Karen, a senior marketing major, has worked for 5 months as an ID checker and says she likes it because of "all the friendly people" she gets to meet. Karen likes Intramurals because

"it's fun". She plays flag football, volleyball and softball. She also likes racquetball and spectator sports. Her other interests include concert-going, cooking, working-out with weights, and dancing. She is a member of OPA. The Marketing Society, and Hospitality Committee. If she had one thing to tell everyone who comes into G. Rolie White after five, it would be, "please remember you ID" and "you have to push the button on the door to make it open".
