Judge rules home TV videotaping OK

United Press International
LOS ANGELES — A federal judge has ruled it is legal for private citizens to videotape television shows at home, rejecting a legal challenge important to the rapidly growing videotape market by annoyed movie-makers.

The decision Tuesday also upheld the legality of tape recording music and other material from the radio.

U.S. District Judge Warren Ferguson said Congress never intended the copyright laws to apply to such home recordings, commenting that in any case it is too late to halt the revolution in viewing habits spreading throughout the country.

Any other ruling would be unenforceable, the judge said. "Home recording simply cannot be controlled. Nobody is going into anybody's home to prevent it," the judge said.

The film industry plaintiffs said they would appeal.

"Both sides knew going into this case that ultimately it would have to be decided by the (U.S.) Supreme Court," said Sidney Sheinberg, president of MCA Inc.

Walt Disney Productions and MCA brought the landmark suit against the Sony Corp., makers of the Betamax video cassette recorder, and several related companies and retailers.

Although only two film studios and one video recorder manufacturer were directly involved, the ruling was looked to as a precedent applying to the rapidly growing industry.

The moviemakers sought a court order banning the manufacture, sale and use of the machines, on the ground they allow users to circumvent the copyright laws that protect the property rights of film makers and program creators, unfairly reducing the value of the companies' motion pictures.
