Ag soccer team host Rice

There is a new soccer coach and a new feeling circulating around the Texas A&M soccer team.
"Our team is soon going to be a power to be reckoned with," said new soccer coach David Flentge.
The new feeling has to do with the new team spirit.
"The reason for our improvement is because there has been more emphasis on playing as a team," said player Robert Anderson.
The Aggies placed sixth in the Hardin Simmons Tournament last weekend, beating Trinity 4-0 and losing to St. Mary's. The team was led by Paul Winston, Dave Harmon, Brad Southall and Scott Gamble. Gamble scored four of the six Aggie goals in the tournament.
Teamwork had always been a problem for the Aggies with a lot of individual talent and too much individual play.

"It was like having 11 different teams on the field at once," said fullback Brett Creesey. "Each man was playing his own game."
And with a large group of new talent on the team, the opportunity to mold a team-oriented squad is excellent.
"The majority of the rebuilding appears to be done," Flentge said. "It is only a matter of becoming accustomed to each other and communicating on the field."
The team will play its first home game against Rice Saturday at 2 p.m. The game will be played on the field adjacent to Cain Hall. Admission is free.

Woverines to feed on Spartans

By JENNY KELLNER
United Press International
For the next few weeks, Michigan State will be trying to recoup some of the self-esteem it lost when it was trampled by Notre Dame last weekend, a defeat which snapped the Spartans' 10-game winning streak and put a halt to their dream of ending the Michigan-Ohio State stranglehold on the Big-10 conference championships.
The Spartans, ranked sixth last week, were trounced, 27-3, by Notre Dame, the last team to defeat MSU. Michigan State was constantly frustrated by the strong Irish defense, which also defeated Michigan earlier in the season.
On Saturday, the Spartans will entertain Michigan and as the Wolverines are celebrating their 100th year of football, Michigan State should prove to be a perfect host.
Our prediction — Michigan 24, Michigan State 21.

East
Army 17, Duke 13 — The Cadets beat Stanford and should be able to handle the Blue Devils.
Syracuse 17, Kansas 10 — After their opening-season loss, the Orangemen have rolled to three straight victories.
North Carolina State 27, Auburn 20 — Wolfpack squeaked by Wake Forest and faces another toughie here.
Penn State 17, Maryland 6 — Terps weren't ready last week, but the Nittany Lions still don't believe in running up the score even after last week's debacle against Nebraska.
Navy 16, Air Force 0 — Navy passed its first real test with the win over Illinois.
North Carolina 35, Cincinnati 10 — Tailback Amos Lawrence should make the difference here.
South
Alabama 56, Wichita St. 3 — The Crimson Tide will be going after the No. 1 ranking with a vengeance.

Tennessee 27, Mississippi State 14 — Quarterback Jimmy Streater is averaging 225 yards a game. Need more be said?
Florida State 35, Louisville 14 — Always strong on defense, it seems time for the Seminoles' offense to get rolling.
Georgia 17, Mississippi 14 — Upset special of the week.
Southwest
Houston 24 Baylor 17 — Houston will knock Baylor right out of the tie for the Southwest Conference lead.
Texas 56, Rice 3 — Overpowering Longhorns' defense won't even need kicker John Goodson here.
Arkansas 17, Texas Christian 0 — Razorbacks on the way up.
Texas Tech 21, Texas A&M 20 — A battle for conference survival.
Midwest
Iowa 13, Illinois 6 — Iowa scared big powers in earlier games.
Nebraska 42, New Mexico State

12 — The Huskers have gotten badly in past three games but always come back to win big.
Notre Dame 19, Georgia Tech 14 — Irish may break out of the and down routine this week.
Ohio State 45, Northwestern 14 — The Wildcats will look back on their lone victory this week after this one.
Oklahoma 45 Colorado 12 — Sims will be trying to let Sooners break USC and stranglehold on the top two of the ratings.
West
Brigham Young 35, Hawaii 7 — best aerial attack in the nation turned loose Friday night.
USC 45, Washington State 14 — Best against worst in the Pac-8.
UCLA 29, Stanford 14 — changed their image about national TV last week.
Washington 33, Oregon 30 — Undeclared Huskies should continue offensive splurge.

Big games around the Lone Star state

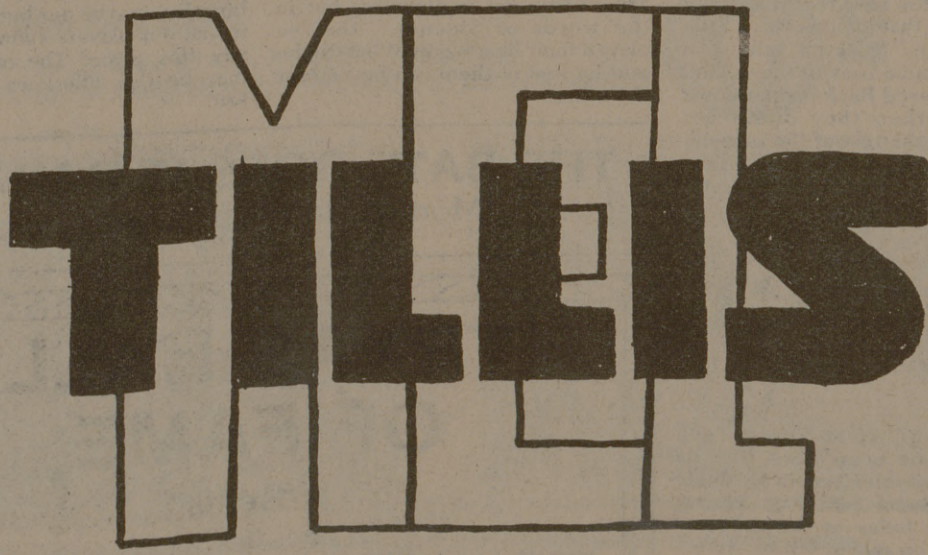

United Press International
More than half the football season remains, but there will be games in the Lone Star Conference and Southland Conference Saturday that could go a long way in determining which teams win those league titles.
Texas-Arlington and McNeese, the teams picked as co-favorites in the Southland Conference this season, meet in Arlington in the league opener for both squads.
In the Lone Star Conference, meanwhile, defending NAIA champion Angelo State makes a key trip to Stephen F. Austin and second-ranked Abilene Christian travels to Texas A&I in a battle of unbeaten teams.

Texas-Arlington is coming off one of its biggest wins in years, having whipped TCU last Saturday night, 21-14.
A win over unbeaten McNeese would make the Mavericks the team to beat in the Southland Conference.
"When it gets down to it, this is the biggest game for us because it is the next one," said Mavericks coach Bud Elliott.
Elliott also took exception to any suggestion that his team's win over TCU was an upset.

"I felt like we have a solid football team and we proved it against TCU last Saturday night," he said. "I don't see where it is such a disaster for TCU to be beaten by Texas-Arlington. I believed going into the game we were the better football team."
"I think we are the most well kept secret in the area."
In another Southland Conference game, Lamar (2-1) will host West Texas in an inter-sectional contest. Lamar already has one league win to its credit.
Abilene Christian and Texas A&I have one of the Lone Star Conference's most heated rivalries. Abilene Christian won NAIA cham-ionships in 1973 and 1977. A&I won the crown three years beginning in 1974.

Stephen F. Austin (3-1) boosted its program under Charlie Simmons and the crowd in Lumberjack Stadium but we feel the game we're open longest winning streak in the and are ranked No. 1 in the A&M student body.
The other Lone Star Conference teams this weekend have Houston traveling to winless Texas and Southwest Texas. Cameron University in a conference game.
On the independent front, Texas State will try to get back the winning road with a trip to Southern Mississippi.
