

International center opens in Bizzell Hall

Various offices concerned with international programs and activities at Texas A&M University have been consolidated in the newly opened International Center on the first and second floors of Bizzell Hall.

The International Center, which houses the offices of the vice president for international affairs and his staff, opened Sept. 26, bringing together for the first time in the same location the departments concerned with international programs and activities.

In addition to the Office of Vice President for International Affairs, the center also includes the offices of Dr. Morris Bloodworth, director of international programs, and Dr. P. Wayne Gosnell, director of international services.

Bees Knees, a six-man band from Dallas, played to a small crowd in the MSC Basement Friday night as Aggies made beelines home and to Lubbock. Battalion reviewer Richard Oliver, one of the few students who stayed here, says the others missed a great concert.

The six-man band from Dallas captivated a full house at the MSC

Basement from the first note, and the patrons let the band know it with enthusiastic applause after every instrument solo or song. The group sounds like a mixture of Toto, Firefall and Jimmy Buffet, if such a combination is possible. In any case, it adds up to good music, and a good time.
