Cowboys lasso Colts' Dutton

United Press International
 DALLAS — The Dallas Cowboys, whose philosophy for years has been to hoard draft picks and use them to build their team, Tuesday traded away their top two choices in the 1980 draft for disgruntled Baltimore Colts defensive end John Dutton.

Dutton, 28, a three-time Pro Bowler who refused to play with the Colts this year, agreed to terms with Cowboys' officials and headed for Dallas from his home in Lincoln, Neb.

Dallas coach Tom Landry said Dutton had been working to keep himself in good physical condition, but that the 6-7, 265-pound lineman would probably not be activated in time to play in the Cowboys' game next Sunday night with the Los Angeles Rams.

League rules allow Dutton a two-week period in which to work out with the Cowboys before he is activated.

Dallas had not traded away a top draft pick since 1967, when they dealt a No. 1 choice to the Houston Oilers in settlement of a dispute over draft rights to former offensive lineman Ralph Neely.

"We felt we should go ahead and make this acquisition because of availability," said Dallas coach Tom Landry. "We feel he can be an excellent addition to our club and has a future left in the NFL. We hope he can help us this year and in future years."

Dutton refused to play for the Colts this season because team officials would not raise his salary from $120,000 to $200,000. Cowboys' officials said Dutton was enthused with the trade.

"He's extremely enthused," said Cowboys president and general manager Tex Schramm. "We've already reached an agreement with his agent."

"We are banking very heavily that his pride and his desire to play on a winning football team will give him the incentive to return to the form he has displayed in the past."

Dutton was the Colts No. 1 draft pick out of Nebraska in 1974. He made three straight Pro Bowl teams beginning in 1975 and when he was forced out of the lineup with a foot injury after 14 games last year he was leading the Colts in quarterback sacks.

The Dallas defensive line has suffered this year because of the retirement of end Ed "Too Tall" Jones and tackle Jethro Pugh, factors which apparently outweighed the loss of two top draft picks.

"Dutton has been keeping in good condition," said Landry. "We feel he shouldn't take long to get back in shape. He played the right end with Baltimore, but we are going to try him at the left end position because Harvey Martin is such a fixture at right end. With his background and experience, he shouldn't have much trouble making the change."

"I think he can help us this year, but he has to get back to his competitive edge. This is like a preseason for him."

Dutton, picked up just 20 minutes before the trading deadline that could have put him out for the season, said he was surprised by the last minute move.

"I didn't expect anything to happen before the trading deadline," he said. "I'm still whirling around. I hope I can help this team doing what I can do best. I can rush the passer a little bit, I think I play pretty good against run."

Dutton, who refused to play for the Colts this season reportedly because team officials would not raise his salary from $120,000 to $200,000, said he was satisfied with his new multi-year contract.

"I never like to talk money," said Dutton. "I got a good salary. It was not a question. I had a lot of money where I was happy."

"The situation in Baltimore was financial. Everything there was going between the team and the management. And I mean the whole team."

The Cowboy management said Dutton had a good attitude about the trade.
