Connally's son John has edge

By DARRELL LUECKEMEYER
Battalion Reporter

The qualifications of former Texas governor John Connally's son, John Connally, to win him a solid edge in the 1980 presidential race, his son said Tuesday.

Mark Connally spoke at an organizational meeting of the Texas Young Democrats for Connally in the Rudder Forum.

Connally said being a former secretary of the navy, secretary of treasury and three-time governor of Texas, his father has the background and experience to return the country to the free enterprise system that the Carter administration is deviating from.

Connally said his father started with nothing and the free enterprise system allowed his father to become what he is today.

"He is running for president as an opportunity to help rebuild the system that helped him," he said.

Connally said his father would undertake goals in three major areas if elected: 1) inflation, 2) energy and 3) military defense.

Connally said to stop inflation, government spending must be brought under control. To do this, he said the United States will have to lessen imports of foreign oil and decrease overall government spending and trade deficits.

"We need to open the doors for commodities to sell abroad and decrease these trade deficits," he said. "We have food which is a bargaining commodity more powerful than oil if we will use it."

Connally said the energy problem of today can be solved by a government would stay out of the way.

Connally said his father is in favor of the use of coal as an alternate source of energy but a mixture of oil and nuclear power is needed to ease the current problem.

The Connally campaign strongly favors of an increase in the defense budget, Connally said. "It is essential that the United States have a strong show of force."

Connally said his father favors of the all-voluntary army as long as it is working to produce a strong defense; however, if it is necessary, Connally said his father would be in favor of a registered draft system — not a draft.

"The country is going to have to go through a recession to get things back in line," Connally said. "As long as we go along with same policies, we are going deeper in the hole."

Connally pledges tax cut if elected

United Press International
SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. — Republican presidential candidate John Connally said Tuesday that if elected he would work to enact a $50 billion to $100 billion tax cut spread over four years.

Such a tax cut would most benefit persons earning between $15,000 and $35,000 a year, said the former Texas governor at a news conference.

"They're the ones who are hurt the most, who are rearing their families, trying to buy a home and are paying the taxes and are being escalated into higher taxes by inflation alone," Connally said.

Asked how he felt, as a result of Texas' oil boom, about the state's announcement Monday of its June/September program more than double those a year earlier, Connally answered, "I'm headquartered in New York."

He said Exxon should increase profits for research and development.

Not used much, aide says Ike tapes confirmed

United Press International
HOUSTON — President Eisenhower's personal secretary has confirmed a Rice University historian's report that Eisenhower installed a White House tape recording system, but she disputed the assertion the system was used extensively.

Ann C. Whitman told the Houston Chronicle in a telephone interview from her New York City home the taping system was installed but it was "absolutely a lie" to say it was extensively used.

"An attempt was made to install a recording machine," Whitman said. "I think it was before I got there. I do remember one attempt (to record) — that I may have tried it."

"Apparently the system was not as sophisticated as they are today. It was a monster. I gave it up completely. I had no time to go over and over and transcribe."

Francis L. Loewenheim reported in the Chronicle's Sunday editions that the taping system was installed and on for five years of Eisenhower's presidency, from 1953 to 1961.

Loewenheim said he had transcripts of White House tape recordings among papers in the Eisenhower Library in Kansas.

On one transcription bearing initials "acw," Loewenheim said in a parenthetical comment to the transcripter.

"Large portions of the tapes were completely garbled," he said. "The noise of the machine was so great that the words, when enough, cannot be understood."

Whitman said she did not remember that transcription and added "perhaps there were other transcripts that were not transcribed."

Loewenheim said other transcripts bear the initials "acw" in two instances state the "taping" began a few minutes after meetings started.

One transcription covered a 1954 meeting in which Loewenheim said Eisenhower told his President Richard Nixon to stop his attack on Democrats and Nixon had accused of being a Communist.
