Man arrested after jump
from gallery of House

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives had an uninvited guest drop in — literally.

A man who identified himself to police as Salieu Mohammad Bah, 31, climbed over the rail of the spectators gallery Monday and jumped nearly 20 feet to the House floor below.

As he made his way down the aisle to the speaker's desk, the intruder said he wanted to speak. He was collared by guards and removed from the chamber before he could say anything more.

Police said they did not know what cause Bah wanted to espouse. About two dozen House members were in the chamber when the incident occurred.

Bah was taken to a local hospital after complaining of back pains, but X-rays did not indicate he had suffered any injury in the jump.

He was charged with disrupting Congress and unlawfully entering or remaining on the floor of Congress. Both charges are misdemeanors.

Court Justice Brennan considering retirement from WASHINGTON — Justice William Brennan, the senior member of the Supreme Court, has considered retiring sometime after the close of the current term, a spokesman said Tuesday.

But the Supreme Court spokesman said Brennan, 73, has not yet made up his mind about stepping down, and he "is certainly staying through this term."

Press officer Barrett McCurn responded to a Washington Post report Tuesday that Brennan, often described as the most liberal member on the high court, told a reunion of former law clerks last weekend he was giving serious consideration to retiring and would make his final decision in December.

Justice Brennan has not decided to retire although he has considered it," McCurn told reporters today. He indicated he talked with Brennan this morning about the subject.

Brennan's departure prior to January 1981 would assure President Carter at least one appointment to the Supreme Court. The last justice named to the court was Brennan, a former justice of the New Jersey Supreme Court, has served on the nation's top court since 1956, longer than any other current member, and is the oldest member on the current tribunal. He suffered a slight stroke in 1975 which impaired the use of his arm. He has been doing well with a rubber ball to regulate his hand.

He also underwent treatment in December 1977 last January for cancer of the cord.

Hawaii blue-collar workers walk out

Guardsmen replace 7,700 strikers

HONOLULU — National Guardsmen replaced striking chefs at some prison facilities Tuesday in the second day of a walkout by 7,700 government blue-collar workers that halted garbage collections and closed recreational facilities.

Unit 1 of the United Public Workers Union, lowest-paid of any civil service unit in the state, walked off the job Monday in a dispute over higher pay and increased fringe benefits.

The strike canceled refuse collections statewide and affected janitorial and food services at public schools, colleges and the state mental hospital. The Honolulu Zoo, municipal golf course and other recreational facilities were closed.

About 200 National Guard personnel were put on alert in case they were needed for security at state jails, but some members of UPW Unit 10 worked despite the Unit 1 picket line, and the guardsmen were not needed for guard duty.

Acting Gov. Jean King said "one or two" National Guardsmen would be allowed to fill in for striking UPW cooks at each of the state's eight jails, if needed.

King, acting for Gov. George Ariyoshi who is on a trip to China, said concern over whether prisoners would get their evening meal prompted the decision to allow the guardsmen to work as cooks.

Sympathy strikes by other UPW units and the state's largest public employee union, the 15,850-member Hawaii Government Employees Association, were headed off by court orders, and Hawaii schools remained open.

Because of some confusion over the strike situation, however, 29 percent of the school population, 172,649 was absent, compared to a normal daily average of 8.4 percent.

Police escorted teachers' picket line at one school on the island of Kauai. Teachers at public schools gathered at pre-arranged meeting places and the UPW Unit 1 picket line

Hawaii residents were asked to rinse and flatten their empty food wastes and place them in avoid producing excessive noise during the period of no collection.

The last union demand was $165 a month across-the-board raises in each year of a two-year contract. Management's last union sources said, was $70 for the first nine months, then a month for the remaining months of the contract.

Hillside strangler sentenced to 6 life prison terms in a row

LOS ANGELES — A former security guard who always wanted to be a policeman will serve six life prison terms for his role in the 10 "Hillside Strangler" sex slayings that terrorized women in the nation's third largest city.

A calm Kenneth Bianchi, 28, showed no emotion Monday as he entered guilty pleas before Superior Court Judge William Keene and was sentenced.

Because of California law, the terms must run concurrently and Bianchi will be eligible for parole in seven years, but almost certainly will not be released, Keene said.

His cousin, Angelo Buono, who he claims was his accomplice in the slayings, also made a guilty appearance later Monday. Bianchi, who maintains his innocence, but one word and was granted two-week delay before entering pleas.

Bianchi agreed to plead guilty to five of the 10 slayings and against Buono, an upholsterer in a suburban Glendale, in a bid to escape the gas chamber.

Keene pronounced life sentences for five of the 1977-78 murders, one count of conspiracy and an extra five-year sentence count of sodomy.
