WHAT IS A PARALEGAL CAREER?

A paralegal career is one of the most exciting new careers for college graduates. A paralegal is a lawyer's assistant who is able to do many tasks traditionally done by attorneys. Not a clerical or a secretarial role, the paralegal is a new legal specialty with excellent job opportunities in law firms, corporate legal departments and banks.

Three months of intensive training in courses taught by law professors and lawyers can give you the skills to interview witnesses, conduct legal research, prepare pleadings, draft transaction documents and prepare cases for trial all under the supervision of an attorney.

The Basic Legal Assistant Course begins January 28, 1980. In addition to the three-month daytime program, the same course is offered as an eight-month evening program. A representative will be at the Career Planning and Placement Center on Thursday, November 15, 1979. Sign up now for an interview!

Rockies no place for Ags Hill

By KURT ALLEN
Battalion Sports Staff

It's been a long road for the Texas A&M offense this season, with frequent execution problems and bad breaks. Even Agatha Christie would have had a tough time explaining the mystery of the sluggish Aggie offense.

But landslide Texas A&M victories the last two weeks over Rice and SMU have erased many doubts about whether the Aggies can cut the mustard offensively. Never before has a Texas A&M team put together back-to-back conference wins of over 40 points.

As the scores indicate, the Aggie offense may be performing as well as it ever has, and some of the credit should certainly be given to such new faces as sophomore fullback David Hill.

This is Hill's first year on the Texas A&M squad, a 5-11, 210-pound product of San Antonio Holmes High. After starting for the Air Force Academy as a freshman fullback, Hill left and transferred to Texas A&M.

Hill's most impressive performance came against Notre Dame when he rushed for over 200 yards against the Irish.

Because he transferred, Hill had to sit out a year to establish eligibility. He continued to work out however, and after officially joining the team this spring, set his sights on capturing the starting fullback job. Now that he's attained his goal, Hill couldn't be happier.

"I have to tell you, it feels pretty darn good to be a starter," Hill said. "I've been working hard towards that for the last two years and it was a little bit disappointing when I didn't get the job right at the start of the season."

"Now that I've made it, I find I'm a lot more enthusiastic about everything, including practice sessions. I feel like an integral part of the team now."

Hill's enthusiasm seems to be shared by the rest of the Aggie offense. Of course, the wins against Rice and SMU definitely have helped to boost morale, as has the mastering of Head Coach Tom Wilson's "I" formation.

"I'm beginning to think that maybe the spring wasn't long enough for us to get used to the 'I,'" said Hill. "However, now I think we're all getting to the point where we know it. I know I feel a lot more comfortable with my blocking than earlier in the season. Now I can tell what defense the opposition is in with one glance, and who to block."

It was a lack of feeling comfortable with his situation that led Hill to leave the Air Force Academy in the first place. Not actively recruited out of high school, except for feelers from Baylor and Rice, Hill knew he wanted to play football at a major college. The question was where.

Enter the Academy's recruiting staff. Having shown Hill all the good things about their school and the surrounding area, and none of the bad according to Hill, the recruiters soon had him signed up. It was only after Hill started playing at the Academy that he knew he'd made a mistake.

"I'm not saying they deliberately deceive you, but they definitely don't tell you what it's really like when they recruit you," Hill said. "When I went up there, they made it a point to take me to all the ski re-sports. When they did show me around the campus, it was never for more than a few hours at a time."

"Thus they sold me on their school. I guess I was kind of young and dumb at the time and didn't give the whole situation enough thought before I went to the Air Force Academy. I just knew I wanted to play football."

"I've never objected to a little regimentation, and am willing to dedicate myself to a goal, but I really wasn't ready for the military regimentation they had there. I found it was starting to get in the way of my own welfare, I'd better get out while I could."

Hill wasn't completely unfamiliar with the Air Force. His father is a lieutenant colonel in that military branch, and Hill attended several schools as the family moved from base to base.

Although born in Massachusetts, most of Hill's relatives are from Pennsylvania. As a matter of fact, almost 30 of them attended the Penn State game when Texas A&M crushed the Nittany Lions 27-14.

Two weeks later, Hill made his first start at fullback against Texas Tech, carrying 14 times and gaining 52 yards. He's been the starting fullback ever since. Last week Hill gained 26 yards on seven carries. To date, he has run for 158 yards this season.

Hill is a scholastic standout on the Texas A&M team. One of two engineering majors on the offense, he said he would like to dispel the myth of the dumb athlete.

"When people in my classes find out I'm a football player, they just

Dickey could be out for Arkansas game Saturday

By MARK W. PATTERSON
Battalion Sports Staff

There is both good news and bad news for Texas Aggie football fans this weekend.

First the bad news: Tailback Curtis Dickey, the third-leading rusher in the conference this season with 808 yards, is not likely to see any game time against the Razorbacks Saturday. Dickey suffered a broken rib against the SMU Mustangs and has not practiced since the injury.

And the good news: Those in attendance at Kyle Field Saturday afternoon will have the chance to judge for themselves who is the best quarterback in the conference this season. The game pit's A&M's Mike Mosley and Arkansas' Kevin Scanlon, the top two quarterbacks in the Southwest Conference this year, in a head-to-head contest to decide conference quarterback supremacy.

"There is a remote possibility that Curtis could be ready by Saturday," Aggie coach Tom Wilson said about Dickey's status for Saturday's game.

"But right now, it's in our plans to start Johnny Hector at tailback and back him up with Earnest Jackson."

"Those two tailbacks have proven themselves this year. They've proven that they're good running backs. They've done what we've asked of them."

Hector is becoming accustomed to stepping in for Dickey this season. The freshman from New Iberia, La., has carried the ball 57 times for 237 yards and three touchdowns.

Jackson has handled the ball 20 times for 87 yards, a 4.4-yard average and the highest yards-per-carry average on the squad.

"Three or four weeks ago, if Curtis was out of a game, I would have said that we would be losing a great deal on offense," Wilson said. "At that point, Earnest Jackson and Johnny Hector were not ready to move in tailbacks in our offense."

"But the past few weeks, both of them have gotten enough game experience that we aren't going to lose that much with them in there. But that's not to say we aren't going to miss Curtis."

"The doctor said that if he (Dickey) can handle the pain, he could play. The question is if he can play with that much pain. He can barely get into a jog because it hurts so much."

"This is the first time we've broken anything all season. I've played all year long with broken ribs and he hasn't missed a game yet. That's got to say something about his character."

The Razorbacks, tied for conference lead and ranked ninth in the country, are led by Scanlon, who is the leading passer in the conference this season, hitting 94.5 percent of his passes for 945 yards and six touchdowns.

The Aggies counter at quarterback with Mosley. The junior from Houston has thrown for 681 yards on 61.1 percent of his passes in 11 attempts.

"It's going to be interesting to watch Mosley go against Scanlon," Wilson said. "I'm not down on any of the other quarterbacks in the conference, but these two are forming better than the others in the league."

"I'm interested in seeing Mosley does against a great team. I'm not saying that we're going to go out and score 47 points. Aggies did against SMU. Our offense has progressed to the point where we can line up and play anywhere."

"The strength of Arkansas' offense is its quickness. We've seen teams that were more physical year but none any quicker looking at the films. I can't see weaknesses in the Arkansas team."

"I'm looking forward to the team of that caliber."
