Soviet yuletide cards steal market in Britain

United Press International
LONDON — The Soviets are aiming to hold all the cards when it comes to Christmas greetings in Britain this year.

Much to the outrage of British manufacturers, the atheistic Russians have crept into the religious Christmas card market and undercut the home-grown product to boot.

The British Greeting Card and Calendar Association, leading the crusade against the foreign intrusion, claims the Russians have entered the market as part of a complicated scheme to give them sterling with which to buy an American computer.

Some of the offending cards displayed by the association said — in most un-Kremlinlike fashion — "May the baby born in Bethlehem on the first Christmas Day, Give you peace and joy and love that never passes away" and "Candles burning brightly on the Christmas tree, Children stand outside the door merrily, Harken to the words they sing, Glory to the newborn king."

Others showed pictures of worshippers attending church or portraits of the Madonna and child.

Jim Galbraith, president of the Greeting Card and Calendar Association, said the Soviet cards were based on British designs from years past.

They are on sale at 15 pence (31 cents) for a pack of 10 — which British manufacturers claim is less than the cost of the materials. The average price of a British card is 5 pence (10 cents).

Galbraith said more than 100 million Soviet cards had flooded the country and were being sold without any mark of origin.

"They come in with no identification, obviously because they are being produced by a nation whose government is atheistic," said another spokesman. "We don't mind honest competition, but people should have the freedom to choose whether they want to buy Russian Christmas cards or not."

Michael Bleston, a member of the association's committee on Russian cards, charged, "The whole thing was the result of a deal between the Russian government and the Control Data Corp. of America."

"The Russians want to buy a computer, and in order to generate foreign exchange, the Americans helped them set up this plan."

There was no immediate comment from the Russians or the American company.

The British have struck back, though, in terms of size and technology. One British entry on the market this Christmas is a 9 pound card faced in silk that has a music box that plays Silent Night and sells for $18.90.

One South African to hang
12 found guilty of treason

United Press International
PIETERMARITZBURG, South Africa — Judge Johan Hefer found 12 black militants guilty of high treason Thursday and sentenced one of them to death.

The other 11 defendants received sentences ranging from 14 years to 19 years imprisonment.

The prosecutor had demanded the death penalty for all the defendants.

It was the first time in South African history that anyone has been sentenced to hang for treason.

The death penalty was decreed against James Mange, 24. He also was sentenced to 18 months imprisonment for contempt of court in the two-month trial in Pietermaritzburg, a small college town 50 miles west of Durban.

The other 11 defendants had one year added to their sentences for contempt of court.

The guilty verdict and sentencing came at the end of a stormy session that saw the judge clear the courtroom three times and charge the defendants with contempt.

The 12 sat stony-faced as the judge ended a 12-word trial summation and found them guilty of treason charges under South Africa's anti-terror laws. They were acquitted of alternate charges of conspiring to commit murder.

Hefer ordered the courtroom cleared for the 12:00 time Thursday. Earlier the defendants chanted anti-apartheid slogans, waved protest signs and jeered the judge from the glass cage built around the bench where they have been sitting during the long trial.

The men, who have admitted being members of the outlawed African National Congress, were charged with 12 counts of high treason and 43 alternate counts of sabotage and anti-government activities. All the charges arose from a series of shootouts with police in 1976.

Palestinian mayor expelled
Sinai Desert zone yielded

United Press International
TEL AVIV, Israel — Israel handed over a craggy hunk of the Sinai Desert to Egypt Thursday but in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip there was spreading protest over the decision to expel a prominent Palestinian mayor.

The brief military ceremony took place at a civilian airfield at the foot of the sixth-century Monastery of St. Catherine, marking the transfer of an 600 square-mile, arc-shaped zone as called for in the March 26 Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

The Israelis say they have more than $7 million invested in the area.

Israel moved up the handover of the zone by two months as a goodwill gesture to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in another phase of the Jewish state's three-year withdrawal from the desert region.

As a handful of Israeli civilians and troops Wednesday left the St. Catherine complex that includes an air terminal, motel and a school built during more than 12 years of occupation, the Cabinet's powerful ministerial defense committee reaffirmed an expulsion order against Mayor Sam Shaka of Nablus.

The mayors of 25 West Bank towns and of Gaza city in the Gaza Strip resigned in sympathy and school business strikes hit Nablus and at least three other West Bank cities.

Shaka was arrested Sunday pending the outcome of an appeal against Israel's Supreme Court against his deportation order. He was expelled for allegedly providing support for Palestinian terrorist activities but maintains his resignation was misinterpreted.
