Aggies croak Frogs; preparing for Texas

By MARK W. PATTERSON
Battalion Sports Staff

The countdown to Texas has begun.

The Texas A&M football team disposed of its final obstacle, the TCU Horned Frogs, Saturday afternoon in Fort Worth 30-7. Now the coaching staff and team can concentrate on the Texas Longhorns.

"You set your goal and now you can achieve it," Texas A&M head coach Tom Wilson told the Aggies in the locker room Saturday. "You have a chance at having a winning season. It's in your hands now."

"Our bowl game is next week."

Two years ago in TCU's Amon G. Carter Stadium, an Aggie freshman named Mike Mosley was given his first start as a college quarterback. Mosley led the Aggies to a 52-23 romp over TCU. But upon his return to Fort Worth, Mosley was as cold as the November wind. The hero of two years ago, Mosley became a spectator with 38 seconds left in the first half.

This year, it was David Beal's turn to work the magic. The junior quarterback, who has spent three seasons in a back up role, took over the offense with the Aggies leading 2-0. In the 30 minutes of football he played Saturday, Beal transformed the slumbering Aggie offense into a scoring machine, leading A&M to four second-half touchdowns and an easy victory.

"We went into the game wanting David Beal to get some playing time," Wilson said. "Mike got off to a shaky start. He threw two interceptions and it shook him. We put David in to give Mike a chance to regroup himself."

"There was no need to go back to Mike this game because David was moving the team."

The Aggies scored on four of their seven possessions in the second half. Beal hit on six of 10 passes for 34 yards and two touchdowns while rushing for another. Both fourth quarter touchdown throws went to split end Mike Whitwell.

"Coach Wilson just came over to me in the second quarter and said it (the game) was mine and to see what I could do," Beal said. "I went in and it just clicked for us. The line was blocking great and the receivers were running their routes. All I had to do was throw it to them."

For Mosley, it was a long afternoon on the sidelines.

"I just had an off day today," Mosley said. "Coach Wilson felt like he needed to make a change to give the offense some spark.

"It's hard to stand and watch. But when the change goes for the better, you can't say anything about it. The pressure was on David and I'm happy he played well."

The Aggie defense came within one second of achieving its first shut-out of the season. TCU scored on its last possession of the game, a 26-yard pass from Reuben Jones, the third TCU quarterback of the day, to flanker Phillip Epps.

Until the final touchdown drive, TCU had totaled 58 yards rushing and 17 yards in the air. On the afternoon, the Frogs totaled 66 yards on the ground and 70 yards passing.

"We needed a game like this for so long," linebacker Mike Little said. "I'm just happy it finally happened."

"They didn't run too many plays that we defended in practice. They stayed on the ground more than we thought they would. They didn't fight as hard as I had expected."

"We knew that if it stayed 2-0 for the entire game we could win," Jacob Green said about the Aggie defense's attitude at the half. "We knew that we could keep the pressure on."

"The defense played like the defense has all year. We played as a team — all out for 60 minutes. It was fun out there."

But the Aggies' fun is over. The Texas Longhorns come to town this week in the Aggies' biggest game of the season. The game offers the Aggies a chance to have a winning season — their sixth straight — and to avenge last year's 22-7 loss to the Longhorns.

"I'm looking forward to the Texas game," Green said. "It will be my last as an Aggie, it will be Bonfire week and we'll be at home. We want to get clicking and put on a show."

The curtain rises at 1:30 p.m. Saturday — five days away and counting.

Carr driving Haney home

Texas A&M linebackers Doug Carr (63) and Mike Little plant TCU quarterback Kevin Haney in Amon G. Carter Stadium's turf. It was a day for the Aggie defense as the forced numerous turnovers, giving the Aggie offense excellent field position and holding the hapless Horned Frogs to seven points.

Alaskan women want equal money

WASHINGTON — The women's basketball team at the University of Alaska wears old, mismatched uniforms. Its members say they were told last winter they would have to come up with $250 each if they wanted to make their scheduled five-game trip to Hawaii.

They were so upset three of them went to court.

Now suddenly, the beleaguered women Sea Wolves have the support of the federal government in a lawsuit that could mark the start of a facelift for college athletics.

The Justice Department filed papers in Anchorage to intervene in their lawsuit, in its first action under 1972 Education Amendments barring sex discrimination in college athletics. If it gets its way, women's teams could soon be receiving funding and opportunities equal to men's teams.

And the government took the action just a day after it filed its first suit under Title IX of the 1972 amendments, challenging Texas A&M University's failure to allow women students to join the all-male Texas Aggie marching band and three other elite groups.

The Alaska suit follows a strict interpretation of the Title IX amendments. It says the school's Anchorage campus spends more of its athletic budget on the men's basketball team than the women's team because of the men's greater publicity, travel expense money and a coaching staff that is larger than the women's.

The suit asks the court to force the university in violation of the Constitution and to require it to pay the alleged discrimination. Drew Days III, assistant attorney general in charge of the civil division, said the Justice Department is committed to eliminating such discrimination in interstate athletics. He said he hopes Alaska case, and the Texas case, will create judicial precedents that will help bring about compliance with the law.

The Justice Department has authority only to enforce the law by joining in private actions, and Alaska case is the only one pending in college athletics.

That suit was filed on Jan. 1978-79 team members Catherine Pavey, Mary Owen and Greene.

The three obtained a temporary restraining order against the university on grounds it canceled a game trip to Hawaii, refused to pay for the trip and required team members to each pay $250 if they went to go.

Wyoming's Lewis reassigned

LARAMIE, Wyo. — Wyoming Cowboys head football coach Bill Lewis has been relieved and will be reassigned within the university, President Edward H. Jennings announced Sunday.

Jennings said he and Lewis reached the decision mutually, and that Lewis requested his reassignment become effective immediately. Jennings said he had directed athletic director George McCarty to start a nationwide search for a replacement as soon as possible.

"Coach Lewis and I feel there is no longer adequate interest by the Cowboy fans to carry forward the program that we would like to accomplish," Jennings said.

Jennings said the 1979 season has been "a major disappointment."

"I am confident of brighter days ahead," he said.
