

Waving arms eases ailment, doctor says

United Press International
CHICAGO — Doctors have found a simple solution to on-the-spot treatment of "Raynaud's Phenomenon," according to an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association.
The phenomenon is a medical condition characterized by inadequate blood circulation in the hands brought on by exposure to cold. In addition to discomfort, it sometimes causes disability, Dr. Donald R. McIntyre said.

McIntyre said the simple thing for a sufferer to do is to wave his arms vigorously in the fashion of softball pitchers, which forces blood to the fingers.

Chicago police seek 2 women in reported male rape

United Press International
CHICAGO — Police are seeking two women who reportedly raped a Chicago steelworker even though the man did not sign a complaint.

Officers said the 23-year-old man told them the women appeared to have car trouble, but took him captive at gunpoint when he stopped to help them.

He said they forced him into the back seat of their car, put a ski mask over his head, bound his hands with chains and drove to a house at an undetermined location.
There, he said, they forced him into a bedroom and "used his head repeatedly for several hours" before returning him to his own car late Sunday. He then reported the incident and gave police a sketchy description of the two women.

Court reproves speeding skater

United Press International
LOS ANGELES — Heron Officer Kay Cuttell scolded a 17-year-old man arrested for skating at high speeds through downtown crowds, then returned his skates.
Doug McClure, arrested Sept. 2, was booked on suspicion of endangering public safety.
"I admonished him to be concerned for the good of others, and not to go skating through crowds at 20 mph," Cuttell said.
