Night classes offered

By LOUIE ARTHUR
Senior City Reporter

If you're tired of dancing like you've got two left feet, or if your cake decorating is limited to ready-spread frosting, evening community classes may be the answer.

Both Bryan and A&M Consolidated school districts will be offering courses that span a variety of interests and topics.

To register for courses offered by the Bryan Public Schools, one must fill out and return a form available at the Community Education Office, 20 N. Main St., Room 207, before Jan. 25. Tuition is payable to the instructor at the first class meeting.

Registration for the A&M Consolidated courses will begin Thursday at 7 p.m. in the A&M Consolidated High School Cafeteria, and will continue on weekdays through Jan. 24, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the Community Education Office, 1300 Jersey St., College Station. Class fees are payable at the time of registration.

Courses offered by the Bryan schools include arts and crafts, bookkeeping, bridge, cake decorating, cheerleading, dancing, drama, gymnastics, judo, mechanics, music, photography, physical fitness, power of positive parenting, private business, sewing, Spanish, weight lifting, welding, stock market and investments, and defensive driving.

Most courses are eight weeks long, with fees ranging from $6 to $12.

A&M Consolidated schools are offering more than 120 courses in areas including vocational and office skills, personal enrichment, arts and crafts, communications and languages, music and dance, and fitness and recreation.

Most courses offered by A&M Consolidated are eight weeks in length. Fees range from $1.50 to $25.

In addition, 24 courses for children and youth will be offered, in the areas of art, dance, twirling, tumbling, guitar, tennis, and piano.

Evening classes for high school credit will be offered at Bryan High School beginning Feb. 18. Students must be at least 17 years old and not enrolled at any high school during the day to be eligible.

Classes meet for one hour per course on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday from 6 to 9 p.m. for 10 weeks.

Tuition for each course is $20, with
