Bush now leads Reagan in N.H.

United Press International
BOSTON — George Bush is now in a dead heat with former front-runner Ronald Reagan in the New Hampshire Republican presidential primary race, according to the latest public opinion poll published in Sunday's Boston Globe.

The sample of 616 New Hampshire Republicans and independents polled the week after Bush's victory in the Iowa GOP caucuses showed Bush leading Reagan 45 to 36 percent. No other Republican candidate broke out of single figures.

Among the sample, the 275 persons who said they were likely to vote favored Bush 43 to 39 percent over Reagan with a five percentage point margin of error, the survey showed.

In a similar poll last September, Reagan dominated with 50 percent of those polled favoring the former California governor. Bush received only 8 percent.

Since then the former CIA director has jumped 37 percentage points. Reagan has slipped by 14 points.

The surveys were conducted by Research Analysis Corp. of Boston, an independent firm formally affiliated with the Globe. The latest poll consisted of telephone interviews conducted between Jan. 24 and Jan. 27.

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Ill., was a distant third with 8 percent of the overall sample, a drop of 5 points from his standing in September.

In the latest Globe poll, former Texas Gov. John Connally had 4 percent; Reps. Philip Crane and John Anderson, both R-Ill., had 2 percent; and Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., had less than 0.5 percent.

Baker, Connally, Crane and Dole have lost support slightly in New Hampshire since the September poll, the surveys showed.

The shift from a pack chasing Reagan into a two-man race in New Hampshire, the Globe said, appeared to be credited to Bush's rise from obscurity rather than Reagan's fall from grace.

Last September, Reagan's favorability rating was 66 percent in the Globe Poll. This time it was 67 percent. Bush, who had a 38 percent favorable rating in September, soared to 81 percent this time. During the same period, Bush's unfavorability rating dropped from 26 percent to 14 percent while Reagan's remained constant at 30 percent.

National Guard blamed for death of Fort Dix trainee

United Press International
CLARKSBURG, W.Va. — Lawson D. Hileman, called David by his family and friends, wanted to enlist in the West Virginia National Guard more than anything. He joined and it cost him his life.

Hileman didn't die a hero's death in a war. He collapsed on a dusty dirt road on a hot and humid July night during a 10-mile hike while training at Fort Dix, N.J. He died a few hours later.

The autopsy revealed that he died of acute lung congestion caused by an irregular heart beat. There was also evidence of myocarditis, an inflammation of the heart muscle, and pneumonia, benign pneumonia.

"We also think that heat and exercise stress may have been related to his sudden death," the death report stated.

His parents, Aaron and Velma Hileman, say the Army killed him by ignoring his complaints of illness and disregarding his physical limitations. Now they say the Army is trying to sweep his death under the rug.

"They tortured him to death," Mrs. Hileman said. "The night before he died he called and said he wanted to come home. He coughed every breath he took. He said, 'Ma, I can't take this any more.'"

It was an unfortunate accident, the National Guard and Army officials said. They said it was precipitated by Hileman's zeal to enlist.

"We very definitely have made no determination that there was any negligence," Col. Paul McGowan, commander of Hileman's brigade at Fort Dix, said.

McGowan said Hileman had been on sick call about a dozen times before his death. At one point, the soldier received a chest X-ray which showed his lungs to be clear.

Col. John Moon, commander of the West Virginia National Guard, said there was no evidence that the guard was derelict in its duty to ferret out any disabilities.

"We in the guard are terribly upset this happened. It's the first time this has happened. You might relate this to some of the athletic personnel who expired this year in West Virginia. They are practicing and all of a sudden they collapse from heat exhaustion — an accumulation of a number of things."

Hileman had tried to enlist as a 17-year-old, but his parents refused to sign the waiver papers. Three days after he turned 18 on March 3, 1979, he went to Fairmont and carried through his plans despite his parents' protests.

He was allowed to join despite the fact he weighed more than military regulations allowed, suffered from asthma and allergies and had flat feet, his parents said.

Consumer group hits legislators

United Press International
WASHINGTON — The Consumer Federation of America, the nation's largest organized consumer group, has charged the last session of Congress with betraying the consumer.

The federation awarded "zero" ratings to two senators (James McClure, R-Idaho, and Milton Young, R-N.D.) and 25 House members for their voting records.

The only perfect rating in the 96th Congress, 100 percent, went to Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio.

Kathleen O'Reilly, executive director of the federation, said Saturday two votes — on the decontrol of domestic crude oil and on blocking the Federal Trade Commission from regulating funeral homes — were "particularly significant symbols of the congressional betrayal of consumers."

The funeral home measure has passed the House but not the Senate.

Other actions which figured in the ratings, she said, were billion dollar subsidies to big energy companies to develop "a questionably effective, and arguably dangerous synthetic fuel industry," subsidies to aerospace firms, and exemptions for airlines from noise standards.

Four senators — all with 86 percent ratings — tied for top ratings. They were Sens. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., Carl Levin, D-Mich., and Donald Riegle, D-Mich.

In the House, the 25 members who drew zero ratings were:

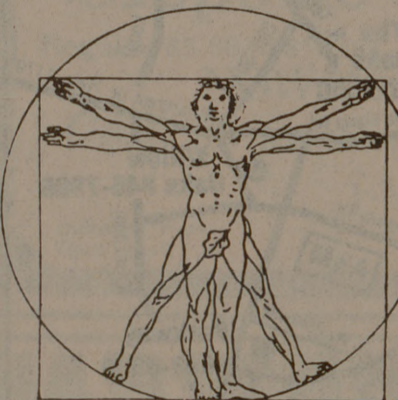

Reps. Don Young, R-Ark.; John Roussetol, R-Calif.; Ken Kramer, R-

Careers and Technology at Intel

The Microelectronics Revolution—and how you can be part of it.

See us on campus February 27.

Think for a minute about what microelectronics technology has already achieved. Yet we are still in the infancy of the microelectronics revolution. And no company is doing more to speed it than Intel.

CHOOSE YOUR AREA OF INVOLVEMENT.

We're an acknowledged leader in four major product areas: semiconductor memories and microprocessors, and microcomputer systems and memory systems. Plus, we're extending our leadership into data-base management.

Our success has created a wide variety of career opportunities in engineering, technical marketing, production management and planning, and finance.

FOUR GREAT LOCATIONS.

We've built our facilities where the quality of life is high, because only in such places can we attract the highly skilled, highly motivated people we need. That's why we can offer you California's San Francisco Peninsula; Portland, Oregon; Phoenix, Arizona; or Austin, Texas, each with its own intriguing lifestyle.

SIGN UP NOW.

If you're about to receive a degree in electrical engineering, computer science, solid-state physics, chemical engineering, or material science, we'd like to talk with you. Stop by your placement office to sign up for interviews during our visit. Or if you'll be unable to see us on campus, write to any of our locations:
