Mars doesn't Coll... make an athlete defe...

United Press International
BUFFALO, N.Y. — If you think astrological misfortune is why you didn't qualify for the Winter Olympics, a team of scholars and scientists has bad news for you. The fault, they say, lies not in your stars, but in yourself.
Their conclusion follows an unsuccessful attempt to verify the claim of two French psychologists that the position of Mars at a person's birth influences his or her ability in sports. The psychologists, Michel and Francoise Gauquelin, contend that world-class athletes are born statistically more often under the astrological sign of Mars.
They based their study on 2,088 European sports champions — cyclists, aviators, soccer and rugby players — which they contended showed nearly 22 percent of them were born under Mars.
The Gauquelins attribute the figure, which statisticians agree is a noteworthy difference from the 16.7 percent probability, to the "Mars effect."
The study came to the attention of the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal. The group, headed by Dr. Paul Kurtz of the State University of New York at Buffalo, is an organization of 80 scholars and scientists "committed to examining claims of paranormal or fringe-science phenomena from an objective, scientific view."
Kurtz, a philosopher, scientist at Harvard; UCLA astronomer George Abell, and scientist Dennis Rawlin set out to verify the "Mars effect" using a great American athlete.
They assembled a list of worthy American sportsmen including boxer Muhammad Ali, swimmer Henry Aaron, swimmer and golfer Jack Nicklaus.
They then contacted the industries in the athletes' birth records to find the time and place of birth. While some state the information because of the Privacy Act, others waived the request.
Birth data on 408 athletes obtained.
The data showed that 22 percent of the athletes, like Ali, were born under Mars, verify the Gauquelins' claim.
"We found no evidence of a 'Mars effect,'" Kurtz said, "but we did find a 'Mars effect' in the claim that 'received considerable international attention in sports circles.'"
"When it comes to explaining extraordinary success of athletes," he said, "the Mars effect, is not in Mars, but in ourselves."

90-year-old still lobbying

United Press International
TOPEKA, Kan. — They call him Tobacco Charlie.
Now in his 20th year of lobbying the Kansas Legislature for cigarette and tobacco interests, Charles Huston is undoubtedly one of the oldest lobbyists in the country.
He is 90 — enjoys his work too much to quit.
"I enjoy the challenge, and I know of no Legislature in the world as clean as the one we have in Kansas," Huston says.
The little going on under the table, "If I ever thought someone would be influenced by a few cents, I wouldn't have anything with him. In all my years, I met one legislator I thought I bought, and he didn't have the guts to get away with much."
Huston got his nickname when he was referred to as "the House as Tobacco Charlie" in a context not totally complimentary. He happily accepted the label, saying he was promoting and enjoying the industry.
Huston said he had been no reports of radiation from the nuclear power plant near Topeka.
He said, however, he had been no reports of radiation from the nuclear power plant near Topeka.
