

Maggie doll scores big in U.S., U.K.

United Press International
LONDON—The Maggie Thatcher dolls were a hit in the United States, so now Britons will have a chance to buy them.

The 8-inch replicas of Britain's prime minister, complete with elegant black shoes and a bouffant hair-do, are manufactured by a British firm specializing in collectors' market dolls.

The company's head said about 250 Thatcher dolls have so far been exported to the United States and soon they will go on sale in Britain for $27.50.

Man plans to change world by supporting Republicans

United Press International
CHICAGO—W. Clement Stone plans to change the world this election year. He does not care much how many millions it costs him.

He has done it before, he said, and he will do it again.

Stone, 77, the founder and still unquestioned leader of Combined Insurance Co., has about $400 million to back what he calls his "obsession."

"I have changed the world and well changed the world for the better," he said. "Obviously Mr. (Richard) Nixon and I feel, and many others feel, that he was president of the United States by virtue of the help that I was in a position to give him."

"In following my own principles of setting goals, I made a resolution that as far as I was concerned there was no power on earth that would keep him from being nominated by the Republican convention, no power on earth that could keep him from being elected — he was elected."

"What I am doing is backing the next president of the United States, who is John Connally. When Mr. Connally is president of the United States and we have more Republicans in Congress, things will change."

Stone, by his own estimation, put more than $5 million of his own money into Nixon's two successful presidential campaigns. The Chicago Sun-Times called Stone probably the single largest political contributor in history — as well as the No. 1 financial angel of president Nixon.

He indicated in an interview he wants to do much the same for Connally, whom he admires as "a pragmatist — a man of action" who would not be reluctant to lie to the Russians or to his fellow countrymen, if necessary, if it served the nation's interest.

He is somewhat inhibited this year by new laws, directed primarily towards persons such as himself, which limit one man's contribution to a political candidate to $1,000. But Stone expressed confidence he can "achieve the same goal" and get a lot more than $1,000 to Connally's Republican quest for the presidency.

In the meanwhile, he intends to keep casting his substantial bread upon other waters, confident that this, too, will change the world.

Stone, who may well be America's most generous fat cat in a presidential year, has also spent lavishly to help those less celebrated than White House aspirants since he came to wealth almost a half-century ago.

Stone's philanthropies are legion.

He is free with his millions, convicts from going back to keep young people from unemployment roles, to mental health, volunteerism and religion.

His latest venture in a program called "Endow a Champion." The proposition is simple: someone will be given $50,000 one condition — that the recipient use it to help a young man or woman who has been a champion in some sport or activity.

"The concept was that we offer to the public an opportunity to recommend persons of circumstances who had been managed to help human beings. Such persons would be invited to pass on their $50,000 worthy cause that would be a dream."

Giving to politicians seems nothing more than to a man obsessed, as Stone says he is.

As he pursues this dream, it appears quite sure there are and may never have been like him.
