Spring fever hits

Sailing Club has just what the doctor ordered

By AMY DAVIS
Campus Reporter

The mercury is rising and the days are getting longer. As is customary this time of year, many students are developing spring fever.

Although it is not fatal, some of the affected students are finding it necessary to skip their classes and get massive doses of vitamin D from the sun.

If whizzing Frisbees, throwing baseballs and guzzling longnecks doesn't help, an afternoon of sailing might be just what the doctor ordered.

For a $15 membership the Sailing Club will give students lessons and free use of sailboats.

Chuck Hargis, vice commodore of the club, will start teaching beginner lessons to club members the week of March 15.

The two-week classes will be Monday and Wednesday nights. Practicals will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays.

"In the classroom, the students learn the rules of the road. In the practical classes, we take the boats out to the tank in Bryan and let them get some actual experience," Hargis said.

After completing the classes, the students are given a test and a novice rating level in the club. "That means they can go out and sail a small boat," he said.

As the students advance, they are given another test and more freedoms with the boats. "The boat you're allowed to take out depends on what level you're on," he said.

The club has 20 boats, ranging from small board boats to racing boats.

The racing boats are used by the most advanced members who compete in sailing contests with other schools.

To join, students should sign up in the club's cubicle at the Student Programs Office in 216 MSC.

Graffiti delays wall repainting

By ANGELIQUE COPELAND
Campus Staff

The appearance of graffiti on the walls of Legett Hall's third floor has caused a change in plans to repaint them.

The graffiti — including a white-painted "Third Floor is Orgasmic," and "Lips," accompanied by a painted pair of lips — appeared last Wednesday night. As a result the walls will not be repainted this month as planned.

Joyce Marquardt, Leggett head resident, said the walls are an "obnoxious" shade of orange, and were slated to be repainted by the University. All that was left to do was schedule a time for the painters to come. The walls had been scheduled to be repainted with a new peach color within the month, said Nolan Mears, assistant area coordinator.

But after the graffiti incident, Mears now is unsure about when the repainting will be done.

"That's a good question," he said. "I'm tempted to tell them that we won't get around to it till this summer."

"It usually takes a long time (for the University) to get things done because of the backlog of work," Marquardt said. "Some girls on the third floor decided to take the matter in their own hands, probably thinking it could speed things up."

Copies of a letter addressed to "third floor resident," signed by Marquardt and Mears, were distributed to residents after the incident. The letter said the delay was the result of "a few students... willfully defacing a new building for the sole purpose of getting the color of the wall changed."

The letter also said requests for funding for future improvements for the dormitory "will be met with a cold shoulder and may never be approved."

The cost of correcting the damage may have to be funded in part by dorm money or by taking a collection from floor residents.

Some of the women think they've been convicted without a trial.

Third floor resident Donnajo Hunt said she thought it was unfair to just assume the damage was done by a third floor resident.

"They jumped all over me about someone on third floor doing it. There are so many rumors around we don't know who she is," she said. "Everybody assumes it was done to speed up the repainting of the wall, but I think that's done just to be done."

Other women don't agree with the way the situation is being handled. "Several girls have been complaining about their parents for Parents' Weekend and seeing graffiti," one resident said. "The peer pressure will get girls in a mess."

Karen White, another third floor resident, said she did not think it fair for student affairs personnel to play games such as leaving messages up for parents to see.

Kristen Nagel, another third floor resident said the girls had suggested repainting the wall themselves to save labor.

"They won't let us repaint the walls to save money because they're against University regulations," she said. "But if the guys wanted something like this they would do it."

University Regulations say the residence hall rooms may be repainted with the permission of the area coordinator, no mention is made of painting halls.

Mears said he told the girls simply painting over the damage was not the way to handle the situation. "I don't think just painting over the walls is the appropriate way to handle this situation," he said. "Property was defaced; they had to be University regulated. I don't think the remedy is just painting over it."
