

Navy to probe charges of molestation

United Press International
MAYPORT, Fla. — The Navy is investigating a young sailor's story that he was stripped of his pants, hung up by his ankles and had his genitals smeared with grease in the engine room of a frigate at sea.

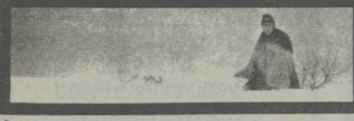

"What they did to me was rape," Seaman Frank Scheidell, 22, of Boca Raton, Fla., told the Florida Times-Union. "I was totally helpless. Now I know how a woman feels about going out late at night. I was being touched in places where I did not want to be touched." Scheidell said six sailors "beat me up in the head, paraded me through the mess deck to the engine room," while the USS Vreeland, a Mayport-based anti-submarine vessel was returning from Caribbean maneuvers early last month.

Scheidell, who said the same treatment was given other sailors as a kind of initiation, also asked Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., to ask the Secretary of the Navy to look into the matter.

U.S., Venezuela set energy pact

United Press International
NEW YORK — Venezuela's energy minister said his oil-rich nation and the United States will sign an energy development agreement today.

Dr. Humberto Calderon Berti, Venezuela's Energy and Mines Minister and OPEC president, also called for an inter-American fund to develop energy sources throughout the hemisphere.

"An adequate energy supply may be a tool to foster democracy and social and economic justice in our hemisphere," he said.

Calderon said the pact he and U.S. Energy Secretary Charles Duncan would sign today in Washington calls for joint development of oil, hydroelectric, geothermal and solar energy projects, but "does not involve any oil sales agreement."

Venezuela, the third largest U.S. supplier of crude oil and refined products, is a major source of home-heating oil for the Northeast.

Calderon said the pact would be followed by two other agreements in agriculture and medicine.

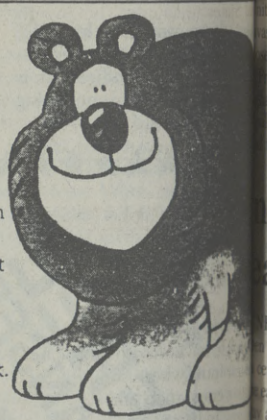

He said he will hold talks with U.S. officials later this week on other energy cooperation in the hemisphere.

In a speech before the Venezuelan-American Association in the United States, Calderon presented his proposal for the establishment of an "Inter-American Energy Fund" that would coordinate efforts to develop energy resources in the hemisphere.

"If Venezuela finds support from the U.S. government, many countries in the hemisphere will join the effort," he said.

Presidential aspirants Ronald Reagan, Edward Kennedy and Edmund Brown have called for hemispheric energy detente usually with Canada and Mexico as a way to solve the U.S. energy problem.

Thanks to you, I still have a home.

For over 30 years, Smokey has been asking you to be careful with fire. During that time, you've helped cut the number of carelessness fires in half. So from Smokey Bear and all of us who live in the forest, thanks for listening. And keep up the good work.
