

Family returns after harassing

United Press International
BATON ROUGE, La. — Neighborhood animosity forced a black family from its home in a newly integrated subdivision, but action by public officials and public sympathy brought them back.

"I decided to come back for a number of reasons," said Walter Scott, who vacated his East Ridgewood home March 23 after shotgun blasts damaged his rear door and cars.

The Scotts were back in the dwelling Tuesday.

"It's home," Scott said. "I've got a job here and they've caught somebody. A lot of my other reasons are personal."

He said the support he received from those callers was an added incentive for him to remain.

Scott, a supervisor on a nuclear power plant construction project in nearby St. Francisville, said news of the harassment against his family and other black residents of the East Ridgewood neighborhood resulted in numerous encouraging telephone calls.

The Scotts were the first blacks to settle in East Ridgewood last December. Two other black families followed them, and then the harassment began.

First they were subjected to eggs and painted racial slogans on their homes. But the trouble progressed to tire slashings and shotgun blasts.

The rear door of the Scott home and two of Scott's cars were damaged by gunfire March 23. The shooting prompted Scott to leave and declare he would not return.

Sheriff's deputies made two arrests in connection with the milder harassment cases four days later. Carl Perry, 34, and his wife, Betty, 30, were accused of encouraging youths to deface the Scotts' home.

The Perrys were charged with contributing to the delinquency of a juvenile and simple criminal damage.

Delores Thomas, another black resident, said she would stay in East Ridgewood despite the trouble.

"I'm not going anywhere," she said. "I'm going to be staying here."

The Scott and Thomas families said there had been no incidents of harassment since the March 23 shootings occurred and the situation was publicized.

several years to come." Early warning sirens began ringing across the northern part of the state as the storms moved through the area of a cold front.

Funnel clouds were sighted in counties but only one tornado confirmed to have caused damage that in rural Whitt, Texas, about 10 miles northwest of Fort Worth.

The Parker County sheriff's department in Weatherford said a twister smashed a small trailer, destroying three mobile homes, injuring one woman. The woman reportedly received a broken leg when her home was wrecked.

As the tornado was reported, Whitt, Weatherford was pummeled by a baseball size hail. A short time later western Tarrant County was hit by hail the size of softballs.

Authorities said unreported damage was done by the storm and windows were broken. No deaths, however, were reported from the hail.

There were tornado sightings in Wise, Parker, Jack, Palo Pinto, Tarrant counties but most were either unconfirmed or produced damage.

There also were sightings of a Kickapoo near Wichita Falls and nearby Holliday.

Funnel clouds were sighted in several areas of the state and rains caused some flooding.

Behind the front, temperatures quickly dropped. At midday the temperature in Amarillo, Panhandle was as low as 31 degrees while it was more than 70 in Dallas.

Protests hit West Bank

United Press International
HEBRON, Israeli-occupied West Bank — Arab protesters outnumbered Israeli soldiers Wednesday and packed 300-strong into a school hall for a secret rally after Israel's move to let Jews live in all-Arab city.

It was the second time in six days since Israel's Cabinet decided to put up two Jewish boarding schools in Hebron that Palestinians — who have been staging demonstrations — foiled efforts by the military to block a rally.

The radical Jewish settlement movement also called a rally in Hebron to celebrate the government's decision but the military government said it canceled.
