United Press International
TULSA, Okla. — Lloyd's of London has paid a Tulsa-based drilling company $17.4 million for the loss of off-shore oil rig seized by the Iranian revolutionary government, company officials said Tuesday.

for Reading and Bates Corp., said the insurance payment will compensate the company for the loss of the drilling rig after the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary government assumed control of the Iranian National Oil Co.

contract agreement between Reading and Bates and the state-controlled oil company, was built before the revolution, and had been in operation since about November 1978.

"Under the advice of the State Department, we evacuated our supervisory people in February of 1979," Fitzgerald said. "Since then, the Iranian National Oil Co. has not lived up to its contract."

Fitzgerald said the Lloyd's payment is "basically an interest-free loan" because Reading and Bates has two lawsuits, totaling $70 million, in federal court against the Iranian government.

The rig, being operated under a
