Carter hopes policy persuasive to Iran

United Press International
WASHINGTON — President Carter said Thursday he hopes the sanctions against Iran will be "persuasive," but warned the United States is prepared to use all its legitimate power to free the American hostages.

In a tough foreign policy speech prepared for delivery to the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Carter also declared that he would use "legal means if necessary" to enforce his decision not to send a U.S. team to the Moscow Olympics.

Carter said he did not regret his past policy of restraint during the five months the hostages have been in captivity.

"But it has become necessary — because Iran would not act in accordance with international law and their own interests — for us to act again," he said.

"The steps I have taken this week to end diplomatic relations and impose sanctions are firm and substantive, and we hope they will be persuasive," he said.

"America will continue the careful and considered exercise of power," he said. "We will pursue every — and I repeat — every legitimate use of that power to bring our people home, safe and free."

Administration officials have hinted that the United States is prepared to impose a naval quarantine in the Persian Gulf as a next possible step in reprisals against Iran.

"It is imperative that the Iranian government resolve this crisis," Carter said.

"Every day that the crisis continues further isolates Iran," he said. "Every day that the American Embassy remains a prison pushes Iran itself farther into lawlessness, down and down the spiral of disorder," he added.

"With a return of rationality, international lawlessness need not be Iran's fate," he said. "Bankruptcy — political as well as moral — need not be its future."

He also said that "if interference from the outside is a threat" to Iran, it does not come from the United States.

IBM: no to talk on divestiture

United Press International
WASHINGTON — International Business Machines Corp. says it will not negotiate further toward settling a decade-old federal antitrust suit unless the Justice Department drops its "precondition" that IBM be broken up.

"We have not cut off negotiations," a company spokesman in New York said Wednesday, "but we wouldn't return to formal negotiations unless the Justice Department withdraws this public precondition they have placed on the negotiations — namely divestiture."

IBM issued the ultimatum four weeks after Sanford M. Litvack, the department's new antitrust chief, told reporters the government will not settle out of court for anything less than "structural relief that would change the makeup of the industry."

But Litvack's statement triggered an exchange with IBM general counsel, Nicholas Katzenbach, who said IBM "will negotiate on the basis of the structural relief which has been the government's objective in the litigation."

The Justice Department sued IBM in 1969 in what has become the longest federal antitrust suit in history.

The suit charged that IBM, which has annual sales of more than $20 billion and controls more than half the computer market, is a monopoly and should be broken up.

Food prices to go up

United Press International
WASHINGTON — Food prices — particularly for beef, sugar and carbonated drinks — should increase significantly during the next three months, but still not as rapidly as the cost of other consumer goods, the government said Thursday.

In a joint report, the Council on Wage and Price Stability and the Department of Agriculture predicted food prices would rise at about a 10 percent annual rate in the second quarter, double the rate of increase in the first quarter.

The report predicted retail and sweet prices would rise in the second quarter as well as bottled drinks and other products that contain sugar.

The agencies said beef prices also expected to increase and for poultry, fats and oils, and fresh fruits and vegetables show moderately.

There was some good news. The agencies said retail egg prices should fall during the next few months.

Anderson still in GOP

United Press International
WASHINGTON — Underdog Republican presidential contender John Anderson said Thursday he would not turn his back on the GOP even if he decides to run as an independent in the fall.

"I have not by any means given up hope of continuing the fight for the Republican presidential nomination," he told the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

But he said he does "intend to fight back" if the choice is between President Carter and Republican front-runner Ronald Reagan, who both, he said, are offering "the same evasions and platitudes that past generations of politicians have served up."

He said he has no desire to create a third party and that "I would not, incidentally, in mounting an independent candidacy, be leaving the Republican Party."

Anderson, returning from a campaign in California, said less of what he decides about the independent campaign, he will support Reagan and George Bush in the 3 California primary. He said only he and Reagan are on the might determine the future of his candidacy.

He said of the independent being urged upon him by some, "It is conceivable. It is that that could eventually lead to that could develop."

Anderson said he has no intention for making a decision on an independent campaign.
