Teen inspired vote thwarts city hall

United Press International
PAMPA — With a miniscule budget of $350 and good political organization, two teen-agers championed the cause of some old, shady elm trees in the arid Texas panhandle town and beat city hall.

Steve Mills, 17, and Thad Ward, 19, Sunday were celebrating the defeat, 1,754 to 877, of a $4.8 million street improvement bond issue that would have meant destruction of scores of Chinese elm trees lining Somerville Street, one of the prettier streets in this town of 20,000.

"I expected it to be closer than it was," said Mills. "It dispelled a lot of what I'd always heard people say about how you can't fight city hall."

The boys' campaign began 1½ months ago when they learned about the bond issue in the local newspaper, and began collecting $150 in donations from concerned citizens. The rest, they made up out of their own pocket.

signed, urging them to vote Saturday. They also took advantage of local uneasiness about a possible tax increase.

Neither of the boys had any interest in politics before, Mills said, and they have no such plans for the future.

"We had to do our duty," Mills said. "No one else was standing up for the trees so I thought we ought to. In this country (the Texas panhandle) if you got a tree for God's sake preserve it."

The stately elm trees have been an issue in Pampa since 1957 because the trees' root system grows toward the drainage channels of Somerville Street, tearing up the pavement along the way. Voters previously beat back two attempts to widen the street.

"We didn't do any paid advertising until last Wednesday, he said. "We had two 60-second spots on radio every hour and a newspaper ad every day. We also printed up 2,000 flyers and passed them out."

Mills and Ward got about 900 people to sign petitions to save the trees, and the boys spent a lot of time on the streets, talking directly to the electorate.

When city commissioners were presented with the petition, Mills said, they just said, "thank you for your concern." The boys went home and began calling everyone who had

College's purchasing probed by Texas House committee

United Press International
AUSTIN — The chairman of the House General Investigating Committee announced Friday the panel would look into allegations of purchasing irregularities at San Antonio College.

Rep. Richard Slack, D-Pecos, made the announcement following a meeting with John Quinlan, a Bexar County assistant district attorney, and John Courage, a newly elected member of the San Antonio College Board.

Courage told the committee the board had unanimously adopted a resolution asking for the investigation. He said purchasing irregularities involving bribery of school officials had been uncovered.

"There very well could be other criminal activity that you may uncover in your investigation," he said. Quinlan said two school employees and the former board chairman have been indicted on bribery and perjury charges.

B-CS chamber group sets concert Tuesday

Jazz and classical music lovers will be able to enjoy both types of music Tuesday evening at the Bryan College Station Chamber Orchestra's final concert of the season.

The program will begin at 8 p.m. in Rudder Theater.

The overture to Rossini's "Barber of Seville" will open the concert, followed by Haydn's Symphony No. 102 and Handel's "Water Music Suite." The highlight of the program will be Lyn Reyna's solo piano performance of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

The concert will be conducted by Paul H. Kirby, who also serves as conductor of the Houston Youth Symphony. Kirby is also a professional oboist and holds advanced music degrees from the University of Michigan and Rice University.

The Bryan-College Station Chamber Orchestra was formed in 1973 and is composed of amateur musicians from all over the Brazos Valley. Twenty-five of the fifty players are Texas A&M University students.

Because of the long-standing relationship between the orchestra, Texas A&M University and the community, a general invitation is being extended to the audience for a reception immediately following the concert. The reception will honor Kirby and J. Wayne Stark.

Stark was recently appointed Texas A&M President Jarvis E. Miller's special assistant for development of cultural programs.
