Students, police fight in Seoul

United Press International
SEOUL, South Korea — Thousands of rock-throwing students demanding democratic reforms and an end to martial law battled riot police in the streets of Seoul Tuesday in the most serious anti-government protest in recent weeks.

At least 23 students were injured in the demonstrations, two of them seriously. About 100 youths were reported arrested.

The street clashes involved about 3,000 students from Yonsei University, one of the most prestigious private institutions in South Korea.

The demonstrations began with a rally to demand the government end martial law and move faster to implement political reforms.

The protest turned violent when the Yonsei students broke through a police line and marched into the streets of western Seoul. The students threw rocks at policemen but helmeted officers forced them back inside the school grounds with clubs and tear gas.

The students retreated but regrouped inside the university and 2 hours later stormed off campus again, throwing rocks and bricks at law enforcement officers.

On Monday, student leaders decided to keep all protest actions on campus, following rumors that army troops may move into schools under martial law in effect since the Oct. 26 assassination of President Park Chung-hee.

For the past month, students have demanded campus reforms, including resignation of faculty members who supported Park. But recently their demands included speedy democratic reforms and an end to martial law.

Brezhnev, Kosygin in Warsaw

United Press International
MOSCOW — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, Premier Alexei Kosygin and a large group of other high-ranking Kremlin officials left Tuesday for a summit conference of Warsaw Pact communist leaders in the Polish capital.

The decision to send both Brezhnev and Kosygin to Warsaw was unusual, analysts said. The two top-ranking Kremlin leaders have not simultaneously been outside the country in recent years.

Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko also was in the official party, along with his fellow Politburo member Konstantin Chernenko.

Defense Minister Dmitry Ustinov, 71, who has not been seen in several weeks, was not a member of the delegation, nor was his name listed in the group of officials who bade Brezhnev farewell at Vnukovo airport. His absence reinforced rumors that he is ill.

Ustinov's presence normally would be required at a high-level meeting of the East bloc military alliance. The leaders of the Warsaw Pact nations have not met since 1978.

In Ustinov's absence, the Soviet Defense Ministry was represented by Marshal Nikolai Ogarkov, the first deputy minister.

The delegation departing for the Warsaw meetings, which begin Wednesday, also included Konstantin Ruskov, a secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee, the Tass news agency reported.

Once not enough for holdup victim

United Press International
DALLAS — Johnnie Johnson figures she has better, less nerve-racking things to do than pass out money to masked gunmen.

Johnson, cashier at a self-service gasoline station, was robbed twice within four hours Monday.

"I'm pretty scared, I'll tell you that," she said.

First came a man with a gun and a white rag around his face, forcing his way into the station about 6 a.m. and taking more than $6,600 of weekend income.

Four hours later, while still jittery over the first holdup, another masked man approached her station. She again found herself under the gun but had only $250 to give the latecomer, who also stole a candy bar.
