A&M employee makes Olympic team

by RICHARD OLIVER
Sports Editor

After only two years of kayaking, Texas A&M University employee Kay Edwards woke up one day last week to find herself on the U.S. Olympic team.

Edwards posted a 2:08 time in the 500-meter kayak race in the Olympic trials, enabling her to place as an alternate on the team.

The trials, held in Craftsbury, Vermont June 9-13, decided the men's canoe and kayak teams, and the women's kayak team.

"I just wanted to get in the top 10," said Edwards. "I did a little better than I expected."

Edwards, who works as a lab supervisor at the IMUNO Genetics Lab on the Texas A&M campus, first placed in a regional competition to enable her to advance to the Olympic trials. Selections for regional representatives and the Olympic team at the trials are on a point system.

Points are obtained by performance in the K-1 (kayak for one person) and K-2 (kayak for two people) competitions. Edwards' point total in both events tied her for first place in the regional event.

Edwards' partner in the K-2 event was Sue Turner of Berkeley, Calif.

In the Olympic trials, Edwards finished eighth out of 27 women in total points. The first four finishers constitute the A-team, and the next four make up the alternates, or the B-team.

The sprint course run by the kayakers is 500 meters long, and is in a lane format.

Although Edwards is currently on the B-team, she will have a chance to try again for the A-team in the national championships August 21-24 in Flatwater, N.Y.

Edwards noted the A-team will compete in Nottingham, England on June 20-22, and the Duisburg, Germany on June 28-29 as an alternative to the Moscow Summer Olympics. The B-team is not currently scheduled to go on these trips, but if funding becomes available, the B-team may travel to events in Mexico, Spain, Germany and Ireland in the fall.

"The funding is not in hand yet," said Edwards, "so they didn't want to send a team."

Edwards said she didn't want to go to Moscow, anyway.

"I'd much rather go to Europe," she said. "It's a lot more fun. You know, you get to see the country and everything."

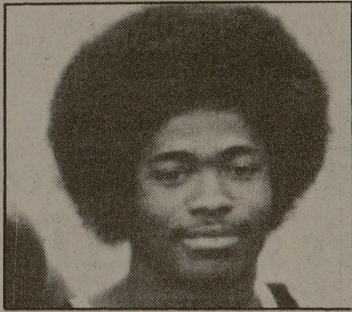

Ag trackster arrested during NCAA meet

Texas A&M University track star Steve Willis was arrested in Austin during the NCAA Track Championships because of an incident which occurred in late May in Waco.

Willis was arrested June 6 at 3 a.m. by the Austin police department in his hotel room. The arrest stemmed from a Waco incident on May 30 involving indecency with a child.

Waco police department official Carol Allemen said Willis was arrested in his Austin hotel room and was transferred to the Travis County sheriff's department that afternoon. He was later released on $5,000 bond.

Allemen said Willis will be free on bond pending an investigation which will determine if there is enough evidence to indict Willis on the indecency charge.

Rangers single out K.C. for 6-3 'needed' victory

United Press International

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jon Matlack pitched well enough to beat the Kansas City Royals — he usually does — but if the Texas left-hander didn't get the victory at least he didn't get saddled with a loss, either. The Rangers lashed out eight singles in the ninth inning, including six in a row after two were out, to rally from a 3-0 deficit and post a 6-3 victory Monday night over the Western Division-leading Royals.

Matlack, who has a 1-3 lifetime record against Kansas City, scattered seven hits over 7½ innings before being lifted in favor of Bob Babcock with his Rangers trailing, 3-0.

"It's a shame for a guy to pitch that good and not get a decision," Texas manager Pat Corrales said of Matlack.

"I'm happy," Matlack said. "We needed to win this one — and I don't give a darn who gets credit for it. I'd like to see us win a lot more the same way. Against any other ball club, I would have allowed just one run. But that Willie Wilson is a bleeping road runner."

Only one of Kansas City's runs off Matlack was legitimate, a towering solo home run by Willie Aikens in the seventh inning. The legs of left fielder Wilson manufactured the other two scores.

Wilson looped a single to center leading off the game, stole second on a Matlack pickoff throw, took third on a shallow fly ball to center and then scored on another shallow fly ball to right. He stretched a single into a double on a short fly in the eighth inning and then jogged home with Kansas City's final run on a Hal McRae single to left.

"He gets no help at all," Kansas City pitcher Paul Splittorff said of Matlack. "I've pitched against him four or five times now and I think this is the first time he's gotten off the hook. He usually goes longer than me (and) never gets any runs. He's got to have more patience than I do."

Splittorff, who is 3-0 in starts against Matlack, was equally as brilliant in a non-decision of his own. He scattered four singles and retired 15 straight Rangers at one point before being relieved in the eighth by Dan Quisenberry.

Pat Putnam led off the ninth with a single against Quisenberry, 4-3, and took second on a one-out single by Bump Wills. Al Oliver grounded out to advance the runners and then the barrage began with Richie Zisk, Rusty Staub, Jim Norris, Jim Sundberg, Tucker Ashford and Putnam piling successive RBI singles.

Babcock, who threw only five pitches in relief of Matlack in the eighth, was credited with his first major league victory in three decisions. Sparky Lyle allowed one hit in the ninth to mop up for the Rangers.

Ellenberger trial under way; charges stem from scandal

United Press International

ROSWELL, N.M. — Norm Ellenberger, who made a name for himself on the sidelines of a basketball court, went into a different type of court Monday — that of U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga.

Ellenberger, who coached the successful University of New Mexico basketball program for seven seasons, is charged with five counts of mail fraud, one count of interstate travel in aid of racketeering and one count of wire fraud. His trial is expected to last at least 10 days.

All the charges are in connection with the UNM athletic scandal, which centers on the alleged changing of academic transcripts in order to make basketball players eligible. The prosecution's main evidence is expected to be wiretap recordings of Ellenberger and his assistant coach, Manny Goldstein, made last fall by the FBI while it was investigating unrelated matters.

Ellenberger's attorneys, in pre-trial motions, had attempted to get the wiretaps thrown out of the trial, but Burciaga ruled that the tapes were legal. Burciaga said the agents were instructed to report any apparently criminal activity even though they were looking specifically for illicit gambling.

Ellenberger and Goldstein are accused of discussing a $300 payoff for forged transcripts so that junior college recruit Craig Gilbert would be eligible for enrollment at UNM last fall. Goldstein reportedly said he had been able to obtain a degree for Gilbert from an official of Oxnard Junior College in California, but had to "Give ... a little money."

"I got him a degree, an AA degree," the FBI recorded Goldstein as saying.

The trial was moved from Albuquerque by Burciaga under protest from Ellenberger's attorneys. Neither the prosecution nor the defense had requested a transfer, but Burciaga moved the trial when Ellenberger's attorneys indicated they were concerned about media publicity and requested the trial be closed to the press.

Later this summer, Ellenberger must also face state charges in Albuquerque before Judge Philip Baiamonte on multiple charges of fraud, most of them related to allegations of falsified travel statements. That trial may provide one of the first tests to the Supreme Court's decision to allow television cameras inside the state's courtrooms.

Ellenberger was suspended by UNM on Nov. 30, 1979, and later fired. He had been head coach at UNM since 1972 and was an assistant coach under Bob King five years prior to that. During his years as head coach, the Lobos compiled a record of 134-62 and won the WAC championship in 1974 and 1978.

His 24-4 team of 1978 is considered his best and finished the season in fourth place in the final UPI national rankings. After that season he missed being named the National Coach of the Year by one vote in the balloting of the U.S. Basketball Writers Association. He was named the District VII Coach of the Year.

Ellenberger is a native of New Haven, Ind., and played for Butler University.
