Dissension, combat affect talk

OPEC may change oil prices

United Press International
VIENNA, Austria — Saudi Arabia is pushing for a "long term" OPEC strategy to adjust oil prices every three months, but few countries participating in this week's special meeting of OPEC ministers advocated new hikes in the price of oil. With the world oil markets glutted, OPEC countries led by Iran are seeking production cuts to shore up sinking oil prices. The oil cartel's petroleum, foreign and finance ministers are meeting against the backdrop of fierce border clashes between two key members — Iran and Iraq — which already threaten to unsettle for agreement. Iran, now unable to sell much of its high-priced crude oil due to the flood of oil on world markets, called Sunday for the 13 Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries members to cut production. But Iraq, important to any effort to curb supplies as OPEC's second-biggest producer, warned its border warfare with Iran would affect the deliberations. "When there is a need we will go down," said Iraqi Oil Minister Tayeh Abdul Karim. "But relations between Iraq and Iran are very bad at the moment and, of course, this will have an influence on the conference." Most ministers said there would be no change in the price structure of $32 to $37 a barrel adopted by all OPEC members except Saudi Arabia last June. The Saudis are expected to raise their own price of $28 a barrel by $2 to $4, but Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani again pushed for Saudi's long term strategy of periodic price adjustments. He made no mention of immediate price increases, however. The Saudi plan calls for adjustment of OPEC prices every three months, based on inflation, fluctuations of major currencies and economic growth in industrialized nations. "We hope to have a unanimous decision," Yamani said. But OPEC sources said Algeria, Libya and Iran, known as hard line states in the cartel, were holding out against the plan. A final decision on long term strategy by the ministers was considered likely to be put off until a second session just before an OPEC summit in Baghdad, now expected early November. Production is the key issue being discussed by ministers, with prices for oil under contract reported to be low as $25.50 a barrel in some of the West as a result of a tight, big stockpiles and high inflation. "We hope the Saudis will have a production cut," said Minister Ali Akbar Mohtashami Rizi to Saudi Arabia's presence of 9.5 million barrels a day, the biggest. Iran's official selling price is $37 a barrel, but it has been forced to find buyers at that price being forced to offer its crude at rates on the "spot" market.

Klan leader free on bond in gun case

United Press International
SCOTLAND, Conn. — Imperial Wizard Bill Wilkinson was released on $1,000 bond Monday pending a hearing in Windham County Superior Court. The hearing originally was set for Monday but was postponed to Sept. 30 at the request of Wilkinson's lawyer. Only a few hours after he was arrested on a weapons charge Sunday, Wilkinson told a Ku Klux Klan rally that the Klan stands for "law and order." Police, who found a loaded .45-caliber automatic pistol in a suitcase in the trunk of Wilkinson's car charged him with possession of a dangerous weapon. A Superior Court judge issued a no-weapons order after Wilkinson announced the rally grounds would be patrolled by armed Klansmen to keep out non-whites and protesters. State trooper Fred Vollono said Wilkinson was stopped at a checkpoint on Cemetery Road outside the rally site Sunday. "We were stopping everybody. We found inside his suitcase, which was inside the trunk of the car, a loaded .45-caliber automatic pistol," Vollono said. Wilkinson was first charged with disobeying a court order that prohibited carrying weapons in the town and of carrying a dangerous weapon in a motor vehicle. State police later dropped the first charge, saying the court order only gave them the right to search cars. After his release, he gave an hour-long speech in a cow pasture at a rally that ended with the burning of a 20-foot oil-soaked wooden cross. He spoke to several hundred people ringed by state police on the usual Klan topics. "God didn't make several races to mix them up. Nature doesn't. You don't see the red birds and the bluebirds getting together." The former electrical contractor said, "The Klan is for the white race; blacks do not have the same whites, and the Klan is for the one that believes in law and order." "The Klan is for America. We're sick and tired of seeing millions of dollars to foreign countries who turn around, burn our assets, take our hostages and spit our faces," he said.

WASHINGTON — Country singer Willie Nelson stuck a microphone in President Carter's face and the two of them belted out "Amazing Grace." Nelson and the president whooped it up before 5,000 screaming fans at the Merriweather Post Pavilion in Columbia, Md., Saturday night, a campaign fund raiser. The audience paid $15 each to sit inside, $10 sit on the lawn. When Carter entered the pavilion, Nelson, wearing a red headband, a sleeveless shirt and jeans, swung into "Georgia" as the crowd roared. Later, at a reception outside the pavilion in a tent of green, white, the Carter campaign colors, the president said Nelson and wife had spent all day Friday, Friday night and Saturday at the White House. "You noticed he sang 'Georgia,'" Carter said. "And you noticed he sang 'Blue Skies.' So if you all will remember me on the 4th of November (election day) the whole nation won't forget Georgia, we'll have blue skies." "Willie represents one of the finest aspects of America," Carter said. "Willie doesn't change. He still retains that basic relationship to the people about him, the love of things that country music stands for." Carter said he and Nelson had also jogged six miles together, adding "He's a darn good runner." Earlier in the evening Carter was wearing a blue suit when he addressed the National Italian-American Foundation dinner, attended by several thousand formally clad persons, at a Washington Hotel. He didn't pause to eat, hurried through his speech and dashed to the White House, where he put on a short-sleeved sport shirt and took off by helicopter for Columbia. There he took his seat in a pavilion between Maryland Gov. Harry Hughes and Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md. The people in the audience cheered, leaped to their feet and waved their arms time after time as Nelson swung through songs ranging from "Rock of Ages" to "Goodnight, Irene" to a ditty about why mothers shouldn't let their kids grow up to be cowboys. Midway through the concert, Nelson called the president to the stage. Together they sang: "Amazing Grace, how sweet the sound, That saved a wretch like me, 'I once was lost, but now am found, 'Was blind, but now I see."

Willie 'n' Jimmy simply 'Amazing'

Afterward, Carter and Nelson were greeted by a crowd of thousands. After San Antonio, Texas, Nelson was expected to return to his home in Texas. Only a few minutes before the start of the rally, the morning at the White House was expected to be over. Afterward, Carter and Nelson were greeted by a crowd of thousands.
