Oklahoma can't 'give' Texas win

United Press International
NORMAN, Okla. — Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said Tuesday his Sooners must play errorless football Saturday if they are to defeat a fourth-ranked Texas team he described as the nation's finest.

"We can't afford to give anybody anything," he said.

The Sooners, ranked 12th and going into the Texas game with a loss for the first time since 1970, have yet to approach Switzer's goal of perfection. They committed 23 fumbles in their first three games.

"If we hold onto the ball, we're a good offensive football team," Switzer said.

But he said the 1980 Sooners do not have the ability to overcome problems they create for themselves with fumbles and mistakes.

"Sometimes in the past we did," he said. "We're not blessed like that anymore."

"We've got to play an error-free game to beat Texas. I think Texas is the best football team in the United States today."

He described the Longhorns as a much better offensive team than a year ago despite the loss of Johnny "Lam" Jones, which he said was offset by the return of such players as tight end Lawrence Sampleton and running backs Rodney Tate and A.J. "Jam" Jones.

"Their defense a year ago might have been a little better, but not at the tackles and linebackers," he said. "Their secondary has young athletes — they're talented but inexperienced."

Mosley moved to free safety

Hill says Ag win excites team

By RICHARD OLIVER
Sports Editor
While most Aggies are tuned in the tube this week following the amazing Astros, the Aggie football team looks warily ahead toward another Houston team.

This Saturday, the suddenly-dangerous A&M squad takes to a wounded Cougar team that is without the services of quarterback Terry Elston, who fractured his wrist against North Texas State two weeks ago.

His backup, Brent Chinn, came in last week against the Bears and was ineffective as the Coogs lost a 24-12 decision to the surprising Baylor Bears.

A&M, in turn, may premier former starting quarterback Mike Mosley at free safety.

But, the Houston Cougars are a team to be reckoned with. With its now famous defensive linemen duo, 6-7, 270-pound Leonard Mitchell and 6-5, 265-pound Hosea Taylor along with a bad case of wounded pride, the team everyone picked to win the conference in 1980 will be out for blood.

Plus, the ever-present rivalry between neighbors A&M and Houston and A&M's lousy record in the Astro-dome will make this an exciting confrontation.

The importance of the contest is not lost on the Aggies. Fullback David Hill, who did not start against Texas Tech in the Ag's 42-21, but played most of the game anyway, said Tuesday the team is ready.

"Man, we're more excited now than ever before," he said. "Now that we've won and we're into the conference, we know every game is important."

The practices this week have been spirited and A&M is gearing up for Houston's potent offense.

"We're learning a new defense," said Hill. "Every team has a few stunts it likes to use, and we learn something new every week."

This week, however, there will possibly be more new faces in A&M's defenses. The squad has been beset by several problems in the past two weeks, and several changes were made prior to the Tech game. The most noticeable was the decision to start David Beal as quarterback, a strategy which paid big dividends as he scored four touchdowns against the Red Raiders.

One player left on the sidelines, however, was Mike Mosley. Though, another strategy works that may put the speedster back on the turf.

United Press International
HOUSTON — No standing-room-only tickets will be sold to Houston Astros playoff and World Series games, a club official said Tuesday.

No public sale of tickets was after several thousand were post-card drawing the past weeks, but that did not stop Astros fans from lining up. Astro-dome ticket officer Tuesday.
