

Harlotry is dead in Deadwood

United Press International
DEADWOOD, S.D. — Padlocks ordered by a federal judge barred the doors to Deadwood's infamous brothels Tuesday. Some claimed it was a long overdue victory for law and order, but there was little joy at Wild Bill Hickok's old hangout. Brothels have been a part of Deadwood's colorful history since the gold rush era and openly operated in the town's downtown tourist area in defiance of state law. But Circuit Judge Roy E. Brandenburg issued a permanent injunction

Monday against three bawdy houses following a three-hour hearing on a civil complaint filed by the state. A similar hearing is scheduled for Thursday against a fourth house. "I think it's fantastic and is supportive of a community effort," said Karen Saxer, who gathered 350 signatures on petitions asking that the houses of prostitution be closed. "We care enough about this city to try to uphold the law." But there was no cheering at the Old Style No. 10, a bar named after the Deadwood saloon where Wild

Bill Hickok was shot to death Aug. 2, 1876. "I think it's a stupid decision, and I've lived here all my life," said Linda Ford, who works at the Old Style No. 10. "I honestly don't think they ever bothered anyone." The judge had granted the state's request for a preliminary injunction in June, but the houses actually had been closed since a May raid by state, federal and local authorities. A federal grand jury, which convened following the raid, failed to return any indictments.

Congressman warns paper that use of ad will libel him

United Press International
DES MOINES, Iowa — Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, warned 85 southwest Iowa newspapers they may be dragged into a libel suit if they publish a paid advertisement critical of him, the Des Moines Register said Tuesday. The copyright story said Harkin claims the advertisement, called "The Hypocrisy of Tom Harkin," is being placed in the newspapers by the John Birch Society. Harkin's letter to the newspapers, marked "not for publication," was not a threat, the congressman said, but an attempt to notify the papers they could become involved in a lawsuit he plans to file against the group that placed the ad.

"It is not my intention to seek legal redress from any newspapers in the 5th Congressional District," he said. "Such action may be unavoidable." "Somebody's got to stop these bully boys. I'm getting tired of these bully boys of the right placing these ads. I'm tired of being bullied around by these people and I'm going to take them on in a legal context." Harkin said the advertisement is "a reprint from a recent issue of 'The Review of the News,' a publication associated with the John Birch Society." "I personally consider the article libelous and I have discussed this with an attorney knowledgeable in this area who also agrees that the article provides the basis for legal action," Harkin told the Register.

Plant leaks gas again, no danger

United Press International
HADDAM, Conn. — The Connecticut Yankee nuclear power plant released a small amount of radioactive gas into the atmosphere for six minutes Tuesday, the second such release in less than two weeks, officials said. Northeast Utilities spokesman Everett Perkins said the "very small, unplanned radioactive release" occurred at the plant at 4:20 a.m. He said the release did not exceed any federal limits and posed no danger to the public. Perkins said the release was reported to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and state and local officials because it was unplanned. On Sept. 26 Connecticut Yankee leaked radioactive gas into the atmosphere for more than three minutes. Northeast, which operates the state's three nuclear power plants, said the earlier release was caused by a technician who accidentally opened the wrong valve. Perkins said engineers were trying to determine how Tuesday's release occurred and exactly how much gas leaked into the atmosphere. He said the maximum dose of radioactivity at the plant boundary measured .003 millirems. The average annual dose of radioactivity received in the area from naturally occurring sources of radiation in the area is 55 millirems, he said. "There would be no danger to the public," Perkins said.

No acquittal of FBI chiefs for break-ins

United Press International
WASHINGTON — A federal judge, rejecting defense arguments that prosecutors had failed to prove their case, refused Tuesday to order the acquittal of two former FBI chiefs charged with approving illegal break-ins. Lawyers for former FBI No. 2 man W. Mark Felt and retired bureau intelligence chief Edward S. Miller now are likely to call a parade of defense witnesses for testimony that could extend four weeks or more. In arguing for acquittal after 13 days of prosecution testimony, defense lawyer Thomas Kennelly contended the break-ins in 1972 and 1973 were part of a legitimate national security investigation — a hunt for fugitive radicals. But chief U.S. District Judge William Bryant said: "Suppose I had three children, and suppose during a particular political situation . . . my children break away and join a radical group. Are you telling me somebody has a right to sneak in my house and go through my effects?" Kennelly said such a search was legal to gather intelligence in a national security probe. But prosecutor John W. Nieves Jr. said the searches at the homes of acquaintances and relatives of fugitive leaders of the Weather Underground organization violated "the very core of the Fourth Amendment."

Strip mining rules OK'd in two states

United Press International
WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus Tuesday approved coal strip mining regulations proposed by Maryland and Louisiana but rejected parts of the reclamation programs submitted by Virginia and West Virginia. Andrus said the failure of Virginia and West Virginia to have their entire programs accepted would not affect interim federal surface mining grants or impose new obligations on coal operators. "Both these critically important coal states have made great strides in achieving primacy and we have every belief they will be successful upon final review in January," said Andrus. He said his agency would work very closely with the two states to help them pass muster. Virginia and West Virginia have 60 days to resubmit their programs to Andrus.
