—Feldman doesn't preach—

United Press International
NEW YORK — Marty Feldman — ping pong ball eyes independently seeking different points of the compass — relaxed in a T-shirt emblazoned "The Pen is Mightier than the Sword" and spoke with relish of the mayhem he's prepared for people who take themselves seriously.

"It's a slapstick fable — a fairy story for adults," he said of his latest movie, "In God We Trust." "It begins 'Once upon our time and it ends with everyone living happily ever after.'"

Marty Feldman is a man who smuggles messages in marshmallows.

In "Trust," he plays a monk, forced out of his cloister "by a landlord that won't take vows of poverty" to rehabilitate an apostate God-orurupted by a power-hungry evangelist named Armageddon T. Thunderbird.

Along the way, his monk — "steeped in the pure Christianity of Christ" — runs into a hooker played by Louise Lasser and a con-man tent preacher, Peter Boyle, who delivers ventriloquist sermons from a mobile church through the mouth of a Moses dummy.

Feldman said the film probably will offend "those who accept Genesis as science," but he added, "This really is a pro-Christ movie. It's also pro-Buddha and pro a lot of other great spiritual leaders who taught us love and truth."

"In one scene, I'm trying to confess my sins to a priest, but he's deaf, so I have to shout — and there I am, pouring my indiscretions out for everyone in the street to hear. On the primary level, it's pure comedy, but on the secondary level, I'm trying to show that priests today are deaf to what people are talking about."

"I'd love to play the fool in 'Lear,'" he said. "And I'd love to play Polonius in 'Hamlet' — or the second grave-digger. Those are marvelous comedic roles. But I've never had any formal training as an actor. I never was aware until I got into this business 13 years ago how busy my face is. I want to be less noisy. With these eyes, it's difficult, but I'm learning to be more still."

"The function of comedy is not to find answers," he said. "It is to pose questions and let people find the answers for themselves."

"My Holy Trinity is Buster Keaton, the father; Stan Laurel, the son, and Harpo Marx, the Holy Ghost."

The Black Forest Inn

GOING TWENTY MILES TO EAT???

Certainly - because at THE BLACK FOREST INN you not only get food worth the trip, but also good wines and beers, sinfully delicious desserts — and a homelike, cozy atmosphere. You will love our new private dining room. The prices are very reasonable, too. We have Continental Cuisine. Located on hwy. 30 (Huntsville Hwy), 17 miles from the FM 158-Hwy 30 intersection, on the left, just past Fuller's Nursery.
